

DRASTIC CUT IN ROAD EXPENSE URGED BY ROOSEVELT, PROPOSAL DRAWS SHARP CRITICISM IN HOUSE, SENATE

DOUBLE BEER TAX VOTED BY HOUSE IN HECTIC SESSION

Levy, Expected To Jump Revenue Between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000, Carries Overwhelmingly by Vote of 120 to 61.

BOOST HELD DOOM OF 10-CENT BOTTLE

Attempt To Remove Midnight to Midnight Sabbath Ban on Sales Is Defeated by 83 to 48.

Flanked by the Whipple-Evans dry bloc and with Speaker Roy V. Harris leading its forces in a bitter battle on the floor, the Rivers administration yesterday swept through the first major tax measure, a bill doubling the levy on beer.

The vote was 120 to 61. Speaker Harris estimated the doubled tax, together with other provisions of the bill, will increase the annual yield from approximately $1,000,000 to between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000.

"End of 10c Bottle." Meanwhile, the Georgia Association of Beer Retailers, Inc., continued its plans for fighting the doubled tax which the association president, Paul Wilson, contends will mean the death of the 5-cent glass of beer and the 10-cent bottle of beer.

Assembling several hundred beer dealers at a meeting at the Red Men's Wigwam yesterday afternoon Wilson declared the "doubled tax is a death blow to the beer industry." He declared the association is still confident the bill will be defeated eventually.

Under an amendment to the bill sponsored by Representative Parker, of Colquitt county, the speaker pro tem, and Representative Lanham, of Floyd county, and Harris, the doubled tax will remain in effect until June 30, 1939. Unless further provisions are made in the assembly session during the spring of that year the levy will revert to the present tax of $2.50 a barrel.

Second Big Victory. Thus the Rivers administration decisively won its second major legislative battle in as many days and displayed a marked strength in both houses.

The senate, by a vote of 47 to 1, Monday passed the administration's $2,000,000 homestead exemption bill after determined efforts to lower the amount of the exemption had mustered only eight votes in the upper branch of the assembly.

The two-day battle over the beer bill was marked by the first display of fireworks in the house. For most of Monday's session and well into yesterday's meeting it was a stubborn battle, the administration yielding to some of the opposition pressure by agreeing to the Parker-Lanham amendment in an effort to conciliate some of the bill's bitterest opponents.

Woo Dry Bloc. Wooing the needed support of Representatives Whipple and Evans and their dry group, the resourceful Harris and his followers likewise agreed to an amendment by Judge Whipple designed to make certain that the local option control of beer licensing, now under the county commissioners, will be continued.

Harris, a wet, also won further dry support for the tax bill when he led the fight against adoption of an amendment by Representative Lewis, of Burke county, which would have removed the midnight to midnight Sabbath ban on the distribution of beer.

Mrs. Josephine Culbertson and her two children, Joyce (left) and Bruce. She is en route to Reno for a divorce because her husband, Ely, the master mind of bridge, insists on writing a book which, she says, "is a 'brutally frank story of his life' to teach my children how not to do things."

CHIANG WILL WIN, AIDE SAYS HERE

Chinese Will Fight With Generalissimo Till End, Major General Declares.

By LEE ROGERS.

China ultimately will defeat Japan.

You have the promise of Major General Chiang Kai-shek, aide of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and executive officer of the Chinese National army for 15 years. The general stopped in Atlanta last night en route to Fort Benning. He is on an inspection tour of military bases of the United States.

"Japan has mobilized three-fourths of its available manpower while China has pressed into service only about one-third of hers," the general said to support his reasoning.

Temporary Setbacks. "China may have suffered temporary setbacks, but the withdrawal of troops from the so-called Hindenburg line was a tactical move on the part of Generalissimo Chiang and by no means is to be interpreted as a defeat," the general explained. "The Chinese people are united for the first time behind Chiang and will fight to the last ditch with him."

The Chinese general, his brown eyes twinkling, said Japan was finding herself in the position Germany did during the first months of the World War when she drove near Paris but never reached the French capital.

"The Japanese lack materials and money for a prolonged war, whereas under the rule of the generalissimo the Chinese financial status has been improved within the last year and China is economically better off than it was a year ago."

Divorce for Bridge Couple Follows His Plan to Write Life Story.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30. (P)—The 14-year bridge romance of Ely Culbertson and his wife, Josephine, has ended, Culbertson said tonight.

Mrs. Culbertson, the noted bridge expert said in a statement through their attorneys, was en route to California by boat and would seek a divorce decree in Reno.

"I have lost a grand slam doubled," Culbertson commented.

Culbertson will sail tomorrow in the liner Queen Mary for a business trip to London.

The disruption of their marriage, the statement said, would not affect their business partnership, the Culbertsons, Inc., from which each receives $100,000 or more annually.

Mental Cruelty Charge. They have two children, Joyce, 10, and Bruce, 9.

"Mrs. Culbertson," the statement said, "will seek a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty, due to Mr. Culbertson's 'ultra-temperamental moods' and partly because he insists on publishing a 'brutally frank' story of his life 'to teach my children how not to do things.'"

The statement was issued by Ralph J. Liebenfeller, attorney for Mrs. Culbertson, and by Berko, Korshin & Berko, Culbertson's counsel.

"Ely is a very good father and a loyal partner," it quoted Mrs. Culbertson. "He will remain my friend and I will continue to work with him, but his temperamental moods make it impossible for me to live with him. Ely still is my favorite partner."

The Bachelor Type. "This is not a case of 'another woman' or 'another man,'" Culbertson was quoted. "Jo always has been my grand romance in life and always will be. Unfortunately, I am a married man with a bachelor's heart."

Crimson Tide Invited to Rose Bowl After Season of No Defeats or Ties

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 30. (UP)—The University of Alabama tonight was invited to play in the Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena on New Year's Day.

Kenneth Priestley made the announcement after a telephone conversation with H. G. Crisp, director of athletics at Alabama and ended the great football mystery of 1937 centering around California's choice of an opponent for the holiday classic.

It will be Alabama's fifth trip to the bowl.

Coached by Frank Thomas, the Alabama team went through a season of no defeats and no ties in nine games.

Alabama scored 225 points against its opponents' 20. California played 10 games in the 1937 season, winning nine and tying University of Washington 0 to 0.

Invaders Planning To Censor All Foreign Cables, Collect Revenues, Informed Quarters Say.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 1. (Wednesday)—(P)—Diplomatic sources said today they understood Japanese officials had decided to return an American-owned steam launch seized by Japanese yesterday.

American consulate officials confirmed Japanese assertions that Japanese sailors had not thrown the United States flag into the Whangpoo river when they took over the vessel.

A Japanese embassy spokesman, denying Japanese had thrown the flag overboard, declared the Chinese crew hauled down the flag.

United States Consul General Gauss lodged a protest with the Japanese consul general against the alleged discourtesy. The launch reportedly was owned by the William Hunt Steamship Company.

The spokesman said the Japanese navy, certain that the vessel was the property of the Chinese government, seized it under recent Japanese naval blockade regulations.

He said if Americans could prove ownership, Japanese authorities were ready to return the launch.

The spokesman admitted five other small vessels of purported foreign nationality were seized including two Italian ships, but declined to reveal the ships' identities.

Informed quarters said Japanese propose to complete their control of all communications in Shanghai within a few days through installation of censors and auditors in the offices of foreign cable companies.

The portion of revenues previously allocated to the Chinese government will be collected, these sources said.

MINIMUM PRICES FOR COAL ORDERED

U. S. Schedule Affects 80 Per Cent of Industry; Slight Rise Seen Here.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. (P)—The Bituminous Coal Commission fixed the minimum prices today which about 80 per cent of the soft coal industry is to charge after December 15.

The prices, ranging roughly from $1 to $4.85 a ton at the mine for the common sizes, were fixed for practically all mines east of the Mississippi river and in Iowa.

The $4.85 top was for egg size in Alabama. The $1 bottom was for industrial slack in western Kentucky. Between those two in the complicated price schedules were hundreds of thousands of prices. The commission figured out a complete price schedule for each mine.

Based on Cost. Prices were based on cost of production, with allowances for size, quality and railroad freight rates to the point of consumption.

Railroad fuel prices, the commission said in a statement, in general were in line with the cost of producing. They ranged from $1.95 to $3.55 a ton.

Coal men pointed out that the prices fixed today were prices for coal at the mine. The consumer would have to add freight rates and, in many cases, wholesale charges before he could know what coal would cost him.

Some coal men said they had heard rumors that one or more coal companies would challenge the constitutionality of the Guffey coal control act, providing for the price-fixing, now that the prices had been established.

Along with the price schedules, the commission issued marketing rules and regulations to govern coal sales east of the Mississippi.

Home of Slain Bride May Be Divided by County Line

Constitution Staff Photo—Rogers.

Surveyors attempted to determine if this house, where a 16-year-old bride was said to have been slain by her estranged husband last Friday night, is in DeKalb or Rockdale county. The house is so near the line that the boundary may divide it in half, as the artist indicates. However, further surveying must be made, said T. C. Jackson, DeKalb county surveyor. Left to right are Jackson, Captain A. L. Hutchins, of DeKalb county police, Deputy Sheriff W. L. McCarty, of Rockdale county, and E. W. Weir, DeKalb county engineer, who spent yesterday tramping through fields and woods in search of boundary markers.

Surveyors Trail Line to Determine If Home Of Slain Girl Is in Rockdale, DeKalb Counties

Mother of Young Bride Gives Version of Shooting Through Window.

By LEE FUHRMAN.

Surveyors doggedly trailed an imaginary line through fields and woods yesterday to clear the mystery of whether or not a county boundary line divides a lonely farm home in which a 16-year-old bride was slain last week.

The surveyors' plumb lines and instruments are expected to determine if Hubert Reagan, 22-year-old farmer, now lodged in the DeKalb county jail, will be tried for murder in Rockdale or DeKalb county.

Sheriff J. L. Cook, of Rockdale county, reported that young Reagan, formerly employed in an Atlanta bottling works, confessed firing a fatal charge from a .12-gauge shotgun at his estranged wife, the former Vivian Cunningham, as she sat in the kitchen of her home on Route 2, near the DeKalb-Rockdale county line, last Friday night.

Further Survey Necessary. Following an all-day search of the country near the Cunningham home, when efforts were made to locate markers denoting the boundaries of DeKalb county, T. C. Jackson, veteran DeKalb county surveyor, announced that further surveying must be done.

Jackson said it will take a few days to determine if the house is in Rockdale county, or if the boundary line runs directly through the house where the slaying occurred.

The hunt for the boundary began at about 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

Following Captain A. L. Hutchins, of DeKalb county police, and E. W. Weir, DeKalb county engineer, and J. H. McCalla, Rockdale county attorney, and Deputy Sheriff W. L. McCarty, also of Rockdale county, met at the boundary marker on Route 12 of the Atlanta-Augusta highway.

Trail Is Followed. The officials followed the trail from the highway across tracks of the Georgia railroad. From the tracks, situated on an embankment, the Cunningham home and the former home of Reagan's father, Lem Reagan, could be seen.

Standing on the railroad tracks and looking at the Reagan home, now occupied by Harry Smith, a farmer, McCalla recalled that several years ago Lem Reagan was excused from jury duty in Rockdale county because of doubt concerning his sanity.

Judge O'Connell named Quinlan J. Shea temporary receiver, requiring him to post a $10,000 bond. In his petition, O'Hara designated himself as creditor of the Providence Tribune Company to the extent of approximately $250,000.

President Objects 'Strenuously' To Incurring Advance Obligations Without Reference to Condition of Budget.

HEARINGS STARTED ON BUILDING PLAN

Wage-Hour Bill Proponents Hint at Sabotage of Farm Legislation Unless Aid Is Given.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. (P)—Congressmen found fault with one item of President Roosevelt's program for helping business out of its recession today but made all preparations for passing another quickly.

Hardly had he asked a deep cut in road building expenditures than Senators Hayden and Ashurst, Arizona Democrats, announced their opposition and Chairman Cartwright, Democrat, Oklahoma, of the house roads committee, issued a sharply critical statement.

All was well, however, with the President's proposal for reducing the cost of home building in the hope of stirring up a construction boom that would have a generally beneficial effect. Hearings were begun, and the legislation was put on the list for enactment at the special session.

Objects 'Strenuously.' In a special message to congress today on road building expenditures, Mr. Roosevelt objected "strenuously" to the practice of incurring advance obligations for this purpose without reference to the condition of the budget.

The practice has been to make "authorizations" one to two years ahead of time for federal assistance to the states in building secondary roads. At the beginning of each year the sum authorized has been apportioned among the states by the secretary of agriculture, to be followed by actual appropriations.

Existing law says that on January 1, next, Secretary Wallace must apportion to the states $214,000,000 of the 1939 authorization. A President asked that before that date, congress cancel the authorization. He added a request that congress limit to $125,000,000 all such authorizations for the fiscal year 1940 and succeeding years.

He made these recommendations, he said, "in view of the large amounts which have been consumed."

POWER EXECUTIVE OFFERS PROPOSAL FOR PEACE PACT

Memorandum Discloses Commonwealth-Southern Head's Offer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Major concessions to the New Deal power policy, and a series of compromise proposals, were advanced as the basis for an administration-utilities "peace pact" by Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, in his recent conference with President Roosevelt, it was learned authoritatively today.

In a memorandum, Willkie informed the President he believed a "satisfactory relationship" could be worked out "without injury to legitimate investment and well within the broad framework of your social objectives."

Willkie's proposals. On the question of property valuation, which is the basic factor in making rates for electric power, the utility executive suggested a two-point formula:

1. That utilities should eliminate immediately from their capital structures all of the "write-ups" in property value which have heretofore been claimed by the Federal Trade Commission;
2. Acceptance of the "prudent investment" theory of valuation, as desired by the administration—which contemplates, as the Federal Power Commission views it, what was prudently and honestly invested in physical property—instead of present method, which takes into account the reproduction cost new.

If Willkie's suggestion were accepted by other utilities, it would mean the scaling down of the utility industry's present capital structure of around $12,000,000,000 by almost 15 per cent.

FARM TEST PLANT URGED FOR SOUTH

Bilbo Suggests Amendment to Agricultural Bill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Senator Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, offered today an amendment to the senate farm bill to create four regional laboratories for discovery of new uses for farm products.

The amendment authorized expenditure of $2,000,000 in the 1939 fiscal year to establish laboratories at cost of $500,000 each, in the south, northeast, midwest and west. Their locations would be determined by the secretary of agriculture.

The regions served by the laboratories would include:

South—Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia.

Northeast—Connecticut, Maine, Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia.

Policeman's Son Captures Intruder in Home

County Policeman E. G. Fitzgerald learned yesterday his son could be very co-operative. Answering a call to his home, he found the youth astride a very much subdued man. The youth told his father he surprised the man in their home. Luther Fitzgerald, 17, is shown demonstrating to E. A. Mathis, a friend, how he held the prisoner, William Black, until help arrived.

Policeman Answers Call to Home And Finds Son Astride Intruder

17-Year-Old Youth Subdues Man After Chase and Rough-and-Tumble Fight; Prisoner Lodged in Fulton Tower.

When you enter a policeman's home and don't know him socially there are worse things than meeting the policeman.

At least that's what 31-year-old William Black thought yesterday as he awaited trial in Fulton tower. He met the policeman's son.

Black tried the front door at a house at 1710 Bankhead avenue, and finding it unlocked, entered. The owner, County Policeman E. G. Fitzgerald, was not home but his 17-year-old son, Luther, confronted the intruder as he came into the living room.

A chase began. Black vaulted the front porch railing and fell, but was caught before he could get up and run.

The two fought over the narrow front yard until Black caught his foot in a length of wire bordering the front walk and began rolling down the 50-foot embankment leading to the street. Luther promptly caught the trailing wire and pulled his opponent back up the slope.

After another fight, Black broke loose and fled to the street, where a flying tackle and a few punches ended the fight. The youth dragged him back to the house and called county police.

Policeman Fitzgerald was driving the radio car, accompanied by Policeman A. C. Adams and Lieutenant W. A. Wells, when he received the call to go to his own home. Several minutes later he found his son on the front porch astride his prisoner.

Black was taken to the tower, where he was held in default of bond on a charge of vagrancy.

Text of Message On Highway Aid

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The text of President Roosevelt's message to congress on reducing annual federal-aid highway appropriations follows:

By the act of June 16, 1936, the congress authorized appropriations totaling $216,500,000, of each of the fiscal years 1938 and 1939, for federal-aid highways, secondary or feeder roads, elimination of grade crossings, forest highways, roads and trails and highways across public lands, to be administered by the Department of Agriculture.

This act also authorized appropriations totaling $21,500,000, for each of the fiscal years 1938 and 1939, for roads and trails within national parks, for parkways to give access to national parks and from connecting sections of a national parkway plan, and for Indian reservation roads, to be administered by the Department of the Interior.

Under the first category there has been appropriated to date on account of the authorization for the fiscal year 1938 a total of $24,500,000 and under the second category a total of $13,500,000, or a grand total of $38,000,000, leaving $200,000,000 still to be appropriated for that fiscal year.

Balance by 1940.

To meet obligations under this $200,000,000 of outstanding authorization, I propose to include an estimate of appropriation of approximately $100,000,000 in the budget for the fiscal year of 1939, with the balance to be provided for 1940. This takes care of the authorization for the fiscal year 1938 and leaves for consideration the authorization of $238,000,000 for the fiscal year 1939.

In view of the large amounts which have been contributed by the federal government, particularly during the past five years, for the construction of public roads, and because of the necessity for taking definite steps to reduce expenditures for the purpose of securing a balanced budget, I recommend that the congress adopt the following policies:

1. Provide for the cancellation of the 1939 authorization prior to January 1, 1938, by which date the Secretary of Agriculture is required to apportion to the states $214,000,000 for such authorizations.
2. Limit to not more than $125,000,000 per annum all public roads authorizations for the fiscal year 1940 and for each of the next few succeeding years.

Since the enactment of the first federal-aid highway act in 1916, there has been appropriated for public highways, including allotments from emergency appropriations, more than $3,100,000,000, of which amount $1,490,000,000 has been made available during the last five years. This annual average for the past five years of $298,000,000 contrasts with an annual average of less than $100,000,000 for the five-year period preceding the depression.

Asks More Power.

There is another provision of the existing law relating to public roads which should receive consideration in this connection. The Secretary of Agriculture is required to apportion to the states the annual amount authorized for appropriation, and to approve projects of proposed states expenditures thereunder which shall constitute contractual obligations of the federal government regardless of the availability of appropriations for their payment and of the fiscal outlook of the treasury. This mandatory provision completely ties the hands of the executive as to the amount of road funds to be included in the budget for any fiscal year. While I do not object to the apportionment among the states of such amounts as may be authorized for appropriation, I do most strenuously object to the mandatory incurrence of obligations by the federal government under such apportionments without regard to its ability to finance them from its revenues. I, therefore, recommend that the congress take the necessary action permanently to eliminate this provision of our public roads law.

tributed by the federal government, particularly during the past five years, for the construction of public roads, and because of the necessity for taking definite steps to reduce expenditures for the purpose of securing a balanced budget.

Turning to the question of authorization and apportionment in advance, he said:

"While I do not object to the apportionment among the states of such amounts as may be authorized for appropriation, I do most strenuously object to the mandatory incurrence of obligations by the federal government under such apportionments without regard to its ability to finance them from its revenues. I, therefore, recommend that the congress take the necessary action permanently to eliminate this provision of our public roads law."

As soon as the message had been read to the senate, Hayden asserted that congress should not "repudiate" its "contractual obligations." The states, he added, mapped out a two-year road building program when their legislatures were in session last year and that to cut the authorizations they then expected would interfere seriously with their programs.

Ashurst joined him with a brief statement that, with all respect, congress "knows more" about appropriations for road building than the President and the secretary of agriculture.

Cartwright Aroused.

Cartwright said that "if President Roosevelt wants to balance the budget and will reduce everything in proportion to roads, that's one thing; but to take it out on roads is something else." He added he did not "propose to take it lying down."

Informed house members said today less than a score of southerners had signed the petition to permit consideration of the administration's wage-and-hour bill at the special session.

Among the southerners who have signed are Representatives Patrick, Democrat, Alabama; Rampeck, Democrat, Georgia; Mahon, Democrat, South Carolina; Bulwinkle, Democrat, North Carolina; Majority Leader Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, and Representative Jones, Democrat, Texas, chairman of the agriculture committee.

Wage-hour bill proponents hinted at sabotage of farm legislation, particularly of cotton provisions, unless representatives of agricultural areas help complete a petition to force a vote on the labor measure.

Two western senators—Borah, Republican, Idaho, and O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming—started the anti-trust bill rolling in congress today without awaiting President Roosevelt's recommendations on the subject.

They introduced legislation to require federal licenses for interstate corporations, and to give the federal trade commission power to withhold such licenses from corporations violating the anti-trust laws.

TAXATION SYSTEM HIT BY AL SMITH

Structure Blamed for Stoppage of Capital Flow.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith declared today the virtual stoppage of the capital flow into industry was due to the nation's taxation system.

"To the owner of capital," he said in an address before the National Association of Insurance Commissioners' convention, "the present situation in industry is about as inviting as a roulette wheel where a $100 play might win $10 or nothing at all."

He blamed the indifference of the average citizen to governmental affairs for the "evils" in the taxation structure. "The public has an idea," he said, "that only the rich and the big corporations pay the tax bill. Most individuals fail to realize they are paying heavy taxes on everything they eat, drink, wear and smoke."

Falls In All But Bridge.

Lacking money and needing a job, young Culbertson tried selling coal, teaching French, taking orders for coffee and even professional dishwashing. He was a failure at all of them.

On their honeymoon, Mrs. Culbertson persuaded him to become a bridge expert. Young Ely had played the game at the Sorbonne in Paris.

He wrote a book on bridge—and tore it to shreds. Seven others went the same day before he finished one that satisfied him.

That was the beginning of the couple's bridge business that made them millionaires. Culbertson's name spread with the popularity of contract and Mrs. Culbertson became a leading woman authority. She is co-author of the so-called "Culbertson system."

Won Many Matches.

Culbertson's bridge career has been punctuated by frequent debates and differences with other authorities and twice he and his wife engaged successfully in matches to settle the issues.

In January, 1931, Culbertson and his wife engaged in a 150 rubber match with Sidney S. Lenz, an exponent of the "official" system. The Culbertsons won by 8,980 points. Culbertson posted a stake of $5,000 and Lenz $1,000, the winnings going to charity.

Two years ago the Culbertsons defeated a team led by P. Hal Sims in a 150-rubber match, their winning margin being 16,130 points.

Culbertson is the author of numerous articles and books on bridge and engaged in a series of movie shorts on contract play.

Mrs. Culbertson sailed Saturday from New York.

BILL TO CONFISCATE 'BUG' PICK-UP CARS OFFERED IN SENATE

Judge Wood, Meanwhile, Sends Five to Chain Gang for Lottery.

The lottery racket in Atlanta received two heavy blows yesterday as a state senator and a Fulton judge struck out against continued operation of the "bug."

Senator Everett Millican introduced a bill in state senate to empower peace officers to confiscate cars used in lottery operations.

Speaking of the bill, Senator Millican pointed out that pick-up

Traffic Big Shots Held in Traffic Jam

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine got caught in a traffic jam today, along with Deputy Harold Fowler, whose job is to see that those things don't happen.

These had red faces: Fowler; two traffic patrolmen who had to be hunted out by Valentine's chauffeur and put to work; an unestimated number of motorists who got tickets for not parking right; and two detectives who had double-parked their car to visit the district attorney's office.

automobiles are an important link in the lottery mechanism and said seizure of these cars would be a severe blow to the racket.

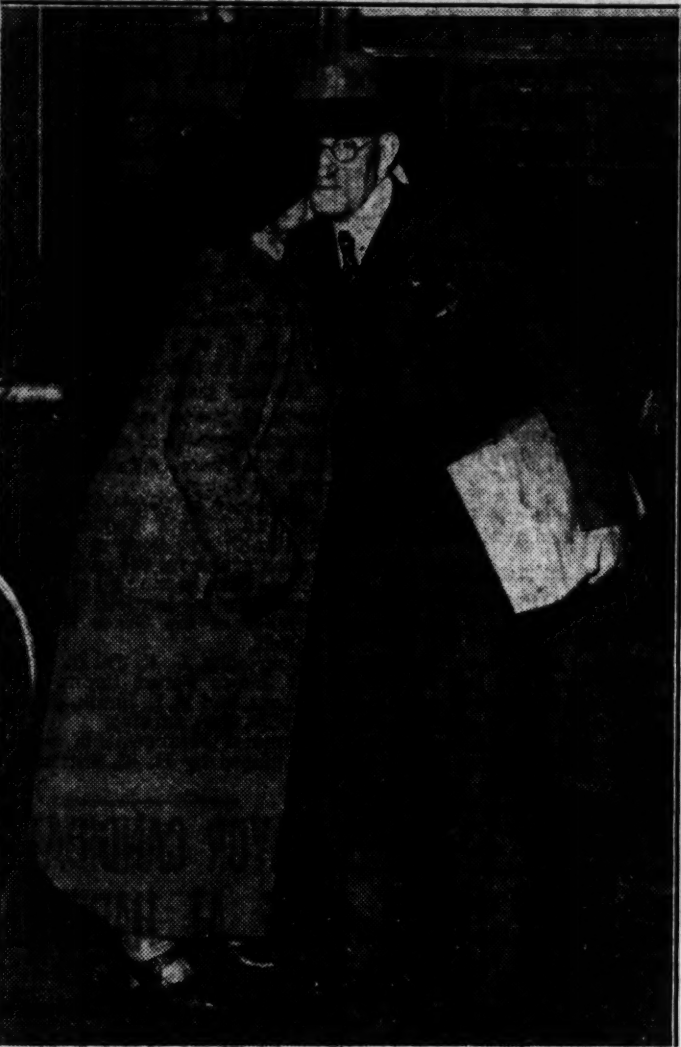

At the same time Judge Jesse M. Wood, of Fulton criminal court, sentenced five persons to prison for lottery operations and announced an ironclad no-fine policy for the future.

Two of those sentenced, Laura Cooper and Charles P. Luke, both negroes, were first offenders, but were given no option of paying fines to escape the chain gang. Each received four months straight sentence as writers of the "bug."

Judge Wood said it formerly had been his practice to fine first offenders and imprison repeaters. Three white men, each a second offender, also received straight sentences. They were:

John P. Moore, of Kennedy street, and Aubrey K. Childers, of Eagan, Ga., who received 10 months apiece, and W. L. Flanders, of North Boulevard, who got six months. Moore and Childers were convicted as pick-up men, and Flanders as a writer.

M. B. M'KINNON, 55, DIES IN BRUNSWICK

Heart Attack Fatal to Glynn Commission Chairman and Former Mayor.

BRUNSWICK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Malcolm B. McKinnon, 55, chairman of the Glynn county commission, former mayor and head of the McKinnon Oil Company, of Brunswick, died tonight.

He was stricken by a heart attack Sunday night.

Born in Brunswick, August 31, 1882, he attended public schools and built up his business and political career here.

Survivors include his widow, the former Miss Lacena Symmes, of Greenville, S. C.; a daughter, Katherine, now a student at Converse College, of Spartanburg, S. C., and a sister, Mrs. J. W. Griffith, of Savannah.

As a young man, he first worked for the old Plant System, now the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. He later became associated with the wholesale and brokerage firm of W. B. Isaacs Company, and acquired the business upon the retirement of Walter B. Isaacs.

He was elected a member of the board of aldermen a number of years ago, and upon adoption of the present city manager form of government was named commissioner and later mayor, in which capacity he served several terms.

The Brunswick-St. Simons causeway was planned and built during his tenure as mayor.

He served several years as a Glynn county commissioner before his election as chairman in 1925, and had held that position ever since. In this capacity and as a citizen he aided the late Howard E. Coffin in the development of Sea Island Beach, and also was a leader in the movement to build the airport which now is nearing completion on St. Simons island.

He also served as naval aide on the staff of former Governor Clifford Walker and was a member of the Georgia Game and Fish Commission until that commission was abolished by legislative action.

He was a member of the Glynn County Board of Health, the Brunswick Kiwanis Club, the Elks, the Masons and the Shrine. He also served as a member of the Glynn County Planning Board.

FUNERAL RITES HELD FOR MISS O'CONNOR

SHIP ROUTES CLOSE ON LAKES FOR WINTER

CLEVELAND, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The 1937 Great Lakes shipping season officially closed at midnight tonight with a total freight movement which may be the largest in history.

Although final figures will not be learned until this winter, it was known that Great Lakes commerce this year definitely was the largest since 1929, when a 138,574,441-ton figure was recorded for the five major commodities.

PHILIPPINE LEADER HITS ALIEN 'YOKE'

Vice-President Sees Danger in Progress.

MANILA, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Shouting his desire for a government "free from any foreign yoke," Commonwealth Vice President Sergio Osmena led the National Heroes' Day celebration today.

He said the vast natural resources of the Philippines, "unless developed under proper safeguards, may within a short period of time constitute an actual danger to our peace and tranquillity."

The Philippines, under an act of the United States congress, will gain full independence in 1946. President Quezon frequently has urged complete separation in 1938 or 1939.

ARMORED CAR USE WILL BE EXPLAINED

Tactical use of armored cars will be detailed at a meeting tonight of the 39th cavalry reserve officers school at Georgia Tech, Colonel A. G. Conoley, commander, announced yesterday.

Major Joel Clayton, commander of the 463rd armored car squadron, and Captain George Elms, cavalry instructor for the reserve unit, will be the speakers. With the aid of maps the instructors will demonstrate the employment of armored cars in cavalry maneuvers and their use in conjunction with other units of the mechanized cavalry.

Salute to the Georgia Power Company!

SEVERAL weeks ago The Georgia Power Company put into action a plan to sell Georgia to the world! The Power Company prepared eight illustrated booklets, printed in color, of widely varying subject matter, all setting forth interesting facts about Georgia.

THESE booklets deal with Georgia's natural resources, her advantages and the many opportunities she offers. They were offered... to you... free! And what's more, The Georgia Power Company offered to pay the postage on these booklets in sending them to any persons named by YOU. Your personal friends... your business associates in other states... in fact to any persons designated by you!

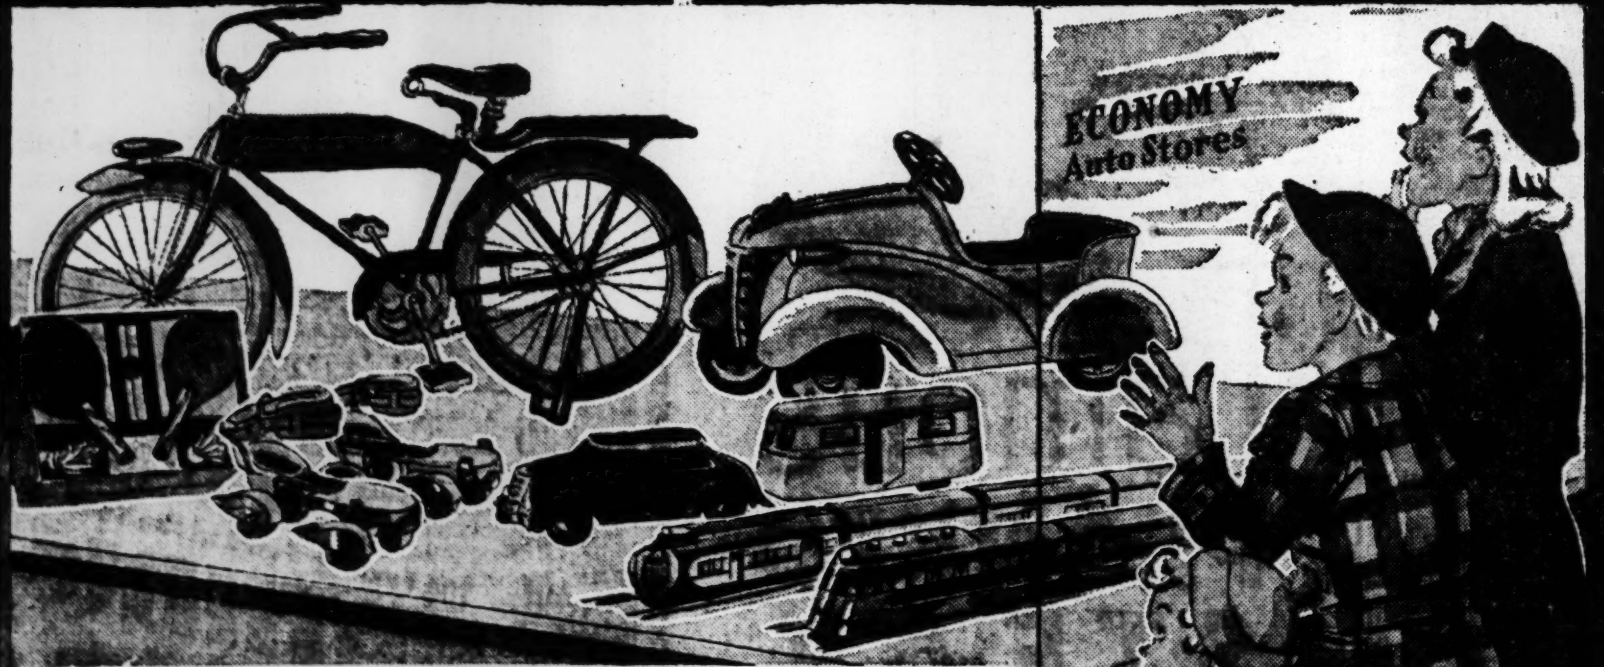

NEEDLESS to say, perhaps, that the original supply of booklets was quickly exhausted. But The Power Company began to reprint more... and more... of these booklets which sell Georgia to the world. The requests are still pouring in, and folks in the Electric Building are still supplying the booklets... mailing countless thousands of these advertisements for our great state to the four corners of the nation!

THE Georgia Power Company has rendered the state a great service in this fine, loyal gesture of good citizenship! We take our hat off to The Power Company—and it gives us great pleasure to offer this word of praise to a corporation which so richly deserves it!

It's great to be a Georgian! It's great to be a fellow-citizen and a satisfied customer of The Georgia Power Co.

GREEN AND LEWIS TO MEET DIRECTLY FOR LABOR PEACE

14 Algie Seamen Indicted in
'Plot'; 3 Buses Fired Upon.

By the Associated Press.
John L. Lewis and William Green expect to step personally into the labor peace negotiations when they are resumed tomorrow at Washington.

These arch enemies in the struggle between the American Federation of Labor and Lewis' CIO expect to head subcommittees which will continue the work of the joint peace conference that recessed yesterday.

Green, AFL president, is to work with George M. Harrison, president of the railway clerks' union and chairman of the AFL peace committee for nearly two years.

Lewis, CIO chairman, is to serve with Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers and chairman of the CIO peace committee.

This four-man joint committee will take over the work, temporarily at least, of the committee of 12 that has met so far.

14 Seamen Indicted.
Meanwhile, at Baltimore, 14 seamen who "sat down" in sympathy with longshoremen on strike in a foreign port, were indicted for conspiracy to revolt and "unlawfully and feloniously endeavoring to make a revolt." They were members of the crew of the government-owned freighter Algie.

At Cleveland, non-striking Greyhound drivers reported three buses were fired upon as strikers considered an ultimatum from the nine affected lines to return to work or lose their jobs.

Carriers rolling over Pennsylvania mountains were targets of gunfire, a dispatcher said. Two of the machines were struck but no one was injured, he reported.

To Extend Ford Strike.
Leaders of the United Automobile Workers' strike against the Ford Motor Company in St. Louis were informed of the CIO union's plans to extend the strike to Ford plants in Long Beach, Cal., and Kansas City.

In Washington, Richard Frankenstein, UAWA vice president, said he had ordered Ford locals to "make all preparations" but to withhold definite strike action. There was little change in the situation at the St. Louis plant, which has continued operating since the strike was called last Wednesday.

REBELS TRY TO CUT MADRID RAILROADS

Warplanes Bomb Guadalajara and Former Capital But Are Dispersed.

MADRID, Nov. 30.—(P)—Spanish insurgent warplanes today bombed Guadalajara, 30 miles northeast of Madrid, in an attempt to sever railroad connections with the former capital.

Continuance of intense insurgent air activity on the central front also brought raids on Madrid, Alcala de Henares, 17 miles to the east, and a near-by government airport.

A government communique said the Guadalajara railroad station was bombed, but mentioned no casualties.

Deadly Scorpion Which Stung Man Here

Miss Jean Crowell, co-ed at Emory University, holds in her hand the deadly Central American scorpion which stung F. C. Chandler, of 211 West Mercer avenue, College Park, as he supervised the unloading of a shipment of bananas Monday at a warehouse on East Fair street. Chandler yesterday was recovering from the effects of the sting, which usually causes death in less than three hours. The scorpion, a close-up of which is shown in the inset, is now preserved in the museum at Emory University.

Prompt Action Saves Man's Life After Deadly Scorpion Stings Him

Death Within 3 Hours Faced F. C. Chandler After He Was Bitten While Banana Shipment Was Being Unloaded, But Luckily He Rushed to Doctor.

A man who faced the possibility of death within three hours after he was stung by a Central American scorpion Monday morning was saved by prompt action. F. C. Chandler, of 211 West Mercer avenue, College Park, employed as foreman in the produce department of a local company, was supervising the unloading of a shipment of bananas from Central America at a warehouse Monday when he felt a stinging sensation in his right shoulder.

Hiding In Fruit.
Chandler turned his head, and his eyes fell on the queer looking animal he later discovered was a scorpion. Apparently the animal had been hiding in the stacks of fruit.

Without losing any time, Chandler was on his way to the doctor, and 20 minutes later he was being treated for the deadly bite. His shoulder was lacerated and the poisonous blood drawn. Then he was taken to a hospital to await results.

While Chandler was recuperating, Dr. P. W. Fattig, curator of the museum at Emory University, had the scorpion well preserved.

NEW BONE-SCREWS ABSORBED IN BLOOD

Airplane Metal Is Employed by Surgeon.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30.—(P)—A new method of repairing broken bones by holding the fragments together with airplane metal screws was announced today before the Southern Medical Association.

The use of screws to hold a broken bone in place until it knits is not new, declared Dr. Earl D. McBride, of Oklahoma City, who reported it. However, the use of airplane metal screws is a distinct advance in surgery because the metal is absorbed in the bone after it has done its work.

The metal is an alloy of magnesium and aluminum. When it is left in the bone tissue the magnesium gradually disintegrates into a gas which is then absorbed by the blood stream. The free aluminum also is gradually eliminated.

2 FOUND DEAD IN AUTO FROM MONOXIDE GAS

HELENA, Ark., Nov. 30.—(P)—Two persons were found dead and a third was found unconscious in an automobile near here today from what Police Chief Shotts said apparently was carbon monoxide gas.

Shotts said one of the victims was George Blair, 25, West Helena carter. The other was an unidentified woman, a brunette about 25 years old. The third occupant of the car was James Beith, 23, West Helena bus driver. Hospital attendants said he probably would recover.

Police Will Get Drunk —And Take Him to Jail

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 30.—(P)—Anyway, this much seems certain—the police will go after holiday inebriates.

Foreman Mattson said the grand jury conferred with law enforcement officers and decided on this Yuletide plan:

Intoxicated persons who don't feel up to the task of driving the family car, can call headquarters and a policeman will see them safely home.

But Mayor Fonville modified the service a little.

"We might go out and get a drunk," he agreed. "But we're going to take him to jail—not home."

WILLIAM MURRAY SAVED FROM CHAIR

Carnesville Slayer's Sentence Is Commuted to Life Imprisonment.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Nov. 30.—(P)—William Murray, convicted of slaying his father-in-law, was saved from the state's electric chair today for the fifth time. Governor Rivers commuted the death sentence to life imprisonment.

Murray was convicted of slaying M. C. Daniel, a farmer, near Carnesville, May 16, 1936. He contended Daniel refused to let him see his (Murray's) wife, Daniel's daughter.

Last February, a last-hour appeal to Governor Rivers by Louis A. Burton, Atlanta attorney, brought a 30-day respite for the condemned man. This later was extended 10 days to permit a hearing for Murray before a sanity commission, which declared him of sound mind. Former Governor Talmadge also had granted one respite, and appeals for leniency caused other delays in execution of the sentence.

Murray, who was scheduled to die at 10 a. m., received his last sentence November 11 by Superior Court Judge Berry T. Mosley in Gainesville.

SLAYING SUSPECTS TO SEEK BAIL TODAY

Accused Savannah Lawyer Charges Tampering With Mail.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 30.—(P)—Charging that his mail had been tampered with, Albert L. Cobb, Savannah attorney and one of five held in connection with the slaying last September of a wealthy Screven county farmer, said today he would ask a federal investigation into "this reprehensible and sinister practice."

Cobb is held in the Richmond county jail, charged with being an accessory before the fact in the slaying of Charlie L. Daughtry near Rocky Ford. Four others also are held, two as principals and two as accessories.

In a prepared statement, Cobb said he also had signed an application for bail, and that applications for the other defendants were ready to be presented to Judge William Woodrum at Milledgeville tomorrow.

It was in connection with the applications, Cobb said, that his mail was tampered with. He said he sent Judge G. C. Dekle data on the applications Saturday and Sunday, and neither letter reached the Miller attorney, who is associated with the defense counsel.

SUICIDE ATTEMPT BY COUPLE FAILS

Pair Found Slumped in Tightly-Sealed Auto.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 30.—(UP)—Edward A. King, 38, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Marguerite Reeves, 33, who left a note saying "we were not permitted to live our life so we wish the end to be this way," tried unsuccessfully today to end an apparently unhappy clandestine affair.

Police found the couple unconscious, slumped in each other's arms in a tightly-sealed automobile. They apparently had inhaled carbon monoxide fumes in an attempt to commit suicide, but hospital attaches expected both to recover.

Mrs. Reeves, wife of P. W. Reeves, who formerly was an aide on the staff of United States Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, of the Philippines, still was unconscious tonight and was reported in critical condition. King regained consciousness this afternoon.

SONJA HENIE IMPROVED.
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 30.—Sonja Henie's fall on the ice during a motion picture skating act yesterday caused a slight concussion, an X-ray disclosed today. Dr. William Branch said she probably could return to work tomorrow.

Accompanying the revue will be Eddie Mallory and his orchestra; Sunshine Sammy, of "Our Gang" comedy fame, and six of the winners of the Harvest Moon Ball Big Apple and Lindy contest, which was held at Madison Square garden.

SEIZURE OF 3 OFFICERS BY TERRORISTS FEARED

JERUSALEM, Nov. 30.—(P)—An Arab sergeant and two constables who disappeared while patrolling the scene of a bus ambush were feared held as hostages today by terrorists who fired at the bus yesterday, wounding three Jews.

The bus was en route to Safad from Acre. Troops and police were searching for the missing officers.

Keep on Serving, Lions' Executive Urges Atlantans

The purpose of service clubs is "to draw men closer together in good fellowship so we understand each other better and serve better," Melvin Jones, secretary general of Lions International, said here yesterday.

Jones was entertained at a breakfast given by the Atlanta Lions Club, prior to leaving this city to address a meeting last night in Macon. He spoke Monday night at a meeting of Georgia Lions, in Decatur.

"Service clubs are one of the best agencies for developing leadership, in this day when there is such a great need for leadership," he said at the Decatur meeting. "Keep on looking. Keep on serving—doing the big things there are in life."

55,000 'VOID VOTES'

Clee Makes Charge in N. J. Contest.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 30.—(P)—Lester H. Clee, defeated Republican candidate for Governor, charged in a supreme court petition today that "at least 55,000" votes were cast illegally in Hudson county for A. Harry Moore, the winner.

Moore formally was declared elected for a third term by the state board of canvassers in Trenton today.

Clee had asked Chief Justice Brogan to annul the certificate and declare him elected. The court could do so should the charges of fraud be sustained.

The law provides for a hearing not less than 15 nor more than 30 days from the filing date.

GIRL ATHLETE WINS BATTLE FOR BAIL IN DEATH OF GIRL

Coroner's Physician Says
Glenn Child Died From Drowning, Not Blows.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Mary K. O'Connor, 19-year-old Immaculate College student charged with homicide in the Labor Day death of Nancy Glenn, 5, was allowed $5,000 bond today by Judge L. Stauffer Oliver.

Miss O'Connor's attorney, William A. Gray, said it probably would be some time before the bond could be raised, freeing her from Moyamensing prison where she has been confined since her arrest 10 days ago in Merchantville, N. J.

Bail was allowed after Dr. William S. Wadsworth, coroner's physician who examined Nancy's body, testified that the Glenn child's death was caused by drowning, rather than the blows which Miss O'Connor allegedly told police she struck with her fists.

Judge Oliver, after listening to arguments on the amount of bail, added: "It depends whether she deliberately placed the child's face in a mud puddle after striking her, or whether she believed the child already dead when the body was turned over."

TENNESSEAN CONFIRMED.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The senate confirmed today the nomination of Finis J. Garrett, of Tennessee, to be a member of the court of customs and patent appeals.

Postmen Can Feed Birdies in Snow

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—It's all right for postmen to feed birds, so long as they don't charge the food up to Uncle Sam, the Postoffice Department announced today.

During the winter, when snow covers the birds' natural food, mailmen may scatter grain provided by interested persons or organizations.

and in Iowa. These supplemented the list of "unfair trade practices" the Guffey act banned.

The United Mine Workers, a CIO affiliate, fought for years for coal price-fixing under federal supervision but met no success.

LITTLE CHANGE EXPECTED HERE

Minimum coal prices set for the Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee district will not affect domestic users to any noticeable extent, but will raise the cost of the fuel to industrial consumers from 35 to 75 cents a ton, executives of Atlanta companies said last night. Railroad users will be affected to about the same extent as industrial purchasers.

Prices announced for domestic lump coal, f. o. b. mines and based on quality, ranged from $2.35 to $4.85 a ton. To this, executives said, must be added a cost of from $2.30 to $2.41 a ton freight from Kentucky mines and hauling and other incidental charges in Atlanta.

Dealers said they expected to be able to sell domestic users for the same prices now in effect, although it was possible a slight increase would be necessary if it was found they could not absorb the slight difference.

Other prices announced were: Domestic lump and egg, $2.35 to $4.85; nut, $2.35 to $2.85; slack, $2.10 to $2.85, and railroad fuel, $2.40.

before the NRA coal code went into effect. During 1934, with partial price-fixing, the industry made money for the first time in years.

The miners wanted price-fixing as a guarantee for the wages they won by collective bargaining. As long as cut-throat competition continued, the miners said, wage schedules were in constant jeopardy.

GEORGE QUESTIONS SENATE FARM BILL

the committee on agriculture and forestry, if next year it is contemplated we will produce, under this bill, 10,000,000 bales. I also understand that you have stated that no acreage taken out of cotton can be planted in any competitive money crop. Is that the theory of this bill?

Senator Ellender admitted this was so but that he had an amendment which would permit farmers of the south to continue the same land uses as in the past and would only prevent them from raising hogs or cattle on diverted acreage.

"I do not wish to debate the right or wrong of this question,"

Patrons Celebrate School's 25th Anniversary

Adair Park school patrons last night celebrated its 25th birthday anniversary and as a feature of the program honored the three members of the faculty who have been continuously connected with the institution since its birth. rejoined Senator George, "but I do want to know if it is the theory of this bill, as drawn, to prevent any acreage taken out of cotton from being put into corn, under the same conditions that apply to the corn producer."

DOUBLE BEER TAX IS VOTED BY HOUSE

yielded his leadership temporarily to Harris and declared the passage of the bill affirms previous statements the house as well as the senate still are strong pro-Rivers. "The house displayed an excellent spirit of co-operation with the administration," Representative Sutton said. "By its vote today the membership showed that it is not going to leave undone the splendid job it started in the regular session."

It was a turbulent house, however that confronted administration leaders before the vote.

Representative Edwards, of Thomas county, accused the administration of "not keeping faith" and branded the tax as "discriminatory."

"Crackerjack" Talmadge. Edwards made passing reference to former Governor Eugene Talmadge as a "crackerjack first-term Governor, but a man who is now running up and down the state creating dissension against the present administration."

Rees, of Webster, favoring the measure, urged its postponement "until we can balance the county budgets along with the state budget."

Hastings, of Fulton, branded the bill as "economically unsound" and quoted medical authorities which he said proved beer was not "bellywash," as charged by Speaker Harris, but rather a drink of medicinal value.

Booth, of Barrow, condemned the bill, but Marshall, of Macon, pledged his vote "because we have started an ambitious program and it must be financed."

Harris' Defense. Taking the floor a second time in behalf of the bill, Speaker Harris defended it as a tax revision measure. "It's taking the burden from the people back home," he said, "and putting it on the people not paying their proportionate share of the tax bill."

Harris said there had been rumors that after the beer bill and Governor Rivers' debenture measure have been passed a move will be started to adjourn the extra session.

"I want to clear that up," said Harris. "I'll stay here as long as it's necessary, so long as we are solving the tax problems of the people of Georgia and working out revision of this structure."

The house defeated in rapid succession four amendments to the beer tax which included proposals: By Evans of McDuffie, to as-

ADAIR PARK SCHOOL IS 25 YEARS OLD

Institution Patrons Celebrate
Opening of New Annex
Costing $40,000.

Adair Park school patrons and teachers last night celebrated the silver anniversary of the establishment of the institution with a home-coming of former students, the official opening of the new $40,000 annex and the award of silver vases and flowers to three members of the faculty.

The auditorium was filled to capacity for the observance of the 25th birthday of the elementary educational center for the Adair Park section of Atlanta.

Miss Lucile Nolan, principal; Miss Nellie Camp and Miss Anna Senkbell, the trio which has been continuously connected with the school since it was opened 25 years ago, were given vases by the Parent-Teacher organization.

Mrs. W. F. Beck, president of the P. T. A., presided, and Mrs. J. D. Wootan was program committee chairman. Music was furnished by Adair alumni.

Ernest Brewer, former board president, made his first public appearance since he was confined with lockjaw, and was given an ovation when Miss Nolan gave him a large part of the credit for the annex and the renovation of the entire building. Brewer was a member of the first graduating class and is at present a member of the board from the fourth ward, in which the Adair school is situated.

Other alumni whose names were listed on the roster of the first class were: Lois Alexander, Susie Cooper, Era Farlow, Laura Langston, Clara Bell Henderson, Hubert Anderson, Edwin B. Lee, Roger Spurlin and Carl Weinmeister Jr.

LAST RITES CONDUCTED FOR ACCIDENT VICTIM

Funeral services for David Benjamin Case, 16, killed Sunday when the car in which he was riding overturned near Monroe, Ga., were conducted yesterday afternoon at Spring Hill.

By Field of Whitfield, to assess $3.10 a barrel and 1 1-4 cents a bottle. Defeated by voice vote.

By Jones of Brantley, to assess $3 a barrel and 1 cent a bottle, defeated by voice vote.

By Lewis of Burke, to legalize Sunday sale of beer. Defeated by 83 to 48.

Senate in Routine. Meanwhile, the senate engaged in routine work, but at the same time prepared to plunge into another skirmish today when an administration bill providing for state civil service is scheduled as a special order of business.

Economy measures and new tax proposals were submitted to the assembly.

Senators Jeff Pope, of Cairo, and Glenn Phillips, of Harlem, asked creation of a legislative economy commission to equalize salaries in state departments and effect savings to taxpayers. The commission would include two senators and three representatives.

Senator Thomas Chason, of Donaldsonville, offered a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to authorize county taxation for medical care of indigents.

ATLANTA, GA., DECEMBER 1, 1937.

LOWER COST HOUSING

While the proposed easing of requirements for loans on new homes under the Federal Housing Administration, described by President Roosevelt in his message to congress, do not effect much change in the total cost of the average house, they do make it easier for the average person to build.

By cutting the amount of down payment required in half, the new plan should result in great acceleration in home building all over the nation.

It has always been difficult for the average salaried worker to accumulate the $1,000 or more necessary to make the down payment of a medium-cost home, necessary under former practices. Under the FHA changes proposed by the President, down payments will be cut in half and thus many will be enabled to undertake the building of a home who could not otherwise consider it.

Everything that tends to increase the proportion of owner-occupied homes contributes to the greater stability of a nation. A sound country must be a country of home owners. The man who lives in his own residence, who calls a few farm acres or even a few front feet of residential urban property his own, is a man with a conscious stake in his country. He is, inevitably, more conservative in his views than the man who has no ties to any one place, whose economic roots do not reach down into the soil.

The immediate benefit of such a financial easing as the President proposes for home builders will be seen in renewed activity in the construction industry and its multitudinous allied interests, with new employment for tens of thousands of workers and a new flow of capital into the pockets of labor and the producers of materials.

The long-term benefit will be seen in an increase in citizens who possess direct, material interest in the nation. There will be more children of the future generations growing up under the security of their father's own roof-tree and, by that token, there will be more citizens keenly alive to the need for governmental stability in the nation.

GEORGIA AND PULPWOOD

The creation by the state legislature of a committee to survey the pulpwood situation in Georgia constitutes a move that may result in far-reaching value to the state in future.

There have been charges that large areas of timber lands in south Georgia have been "clear cut," denuding them of all standing forest growth for the sake of the raw material needed by the new paper pulp mills which are springing up all over the south.

In her forests, Georgia possesses one of the greatest of her sources of future wealth. Proper conservation of those forests today will mean a lasting and increasing source of revenue, whereas if clear cutting and other reckless methods of ravishment are permitted, there will be nothing but bleak areas of naked land in a few short years.

The evils of forest destruction are not confined to loss of the timber wealth, however. With the forests gone, it means the balance of nature is destroyed. The result is great floods, with no trees to hold back the waters, and soil erosion is an inevitable corollary of the sweeping floods.

It will probably be necessary to enact strict laws to compel proper, scientific cutting of all forest lands in the state. These should be passed and enforced as rapidly as possible. For every day that sees continuance of forest looting, whether by industry or by ignorant or reckless private owners, means thousands of dollars taken from the wealth of the future and millions of dollars in potential disaster for the years to come.

It has been estimated that, to meet the demands of both timber and pulp industries, the south, within the next five years, will have to produce more than 25,000,000,000 board feet a year, in place of the estimated cut of 13,000,000,000 board feet last year.

Such a supply can only be maintained if every forest acre is worked and cut only on a strictly sustaining basis. The forest owner who does not obey the rules for proper cutting, cannot reasonably plead ignorance. Either the State Forestry Division or the National Forest Service will gladly furnish all information desired and will co-operate to the fullest extent in every movement to properly conserve the trees.

The edge in modern war is now slightly with the defense, says one who knows. It could be corrected, no doubt, with a livelier cannon ball.

The Caesars may be right about democracies being dumb. And yet free people escape the nervous exhaustion of having to look tough.

To stem the Japanese advance, an early winter is hoped for in North China. The Almighty, they think in those parts, is on the side of the heavier underwear.

For the many who now escape, broadening the tax base would bring it into the category of blunt instruments.

THE SOUTH LEADS AGAIN

The harvest festival at Pine Mountain Valley, federal rural rehabilitation project, provided the finest Thanksgiving event of the year. It marked the successful termination of the first full-crop year for the 1,100 settlers in this restored farm community and it marked a harvest of such bounty that every family in the group had fullest grounds for joyous gratitude.

When the Pine Mountain project was launched there were many skeptics as to the possibility of success. Two hundred families, of rural origin, were taken from the cities where they had failed to find the economic security and the decent livelihoods they sought, and were transplanted to this new opportunity. The federal government aided in the establishment of their homes and in the financing of their farm endeavors through long-term loans. In the early days of the experiment, there were the inevitable few malcontents. These were weeded out. Today there are 200 prosperous, self-supporting, contented families, living on land which, two years ago eroded, neglected and unproductive, is now fertile farm acreage.

This project is parallel, for the families of rural origin, with the Techwood rehousing project, which is the outstanding success of all the government endeavors at slum clearance. The south has led the way in co-operating while applying the beneficial features of the New Deal. It was the southern textile industry which first accepted the rules of the NRA for its employees and which has continued those rates of pay and conditions of work ever since, even though the law itself was held unconstitutional.

Thus at Pine Mountain, at Techwood, and in its happy textile mill villages, the south has put into practice the wisdom of the New Deal and has provided an object lesson for the nation in modern, humanitarian, economic social reforms.

AN IMPROVING RECORD

Atlanta has just cause to point with pride to the record of traffic fatalities within the city limits when compared with that of one year ago. The city mourns, it is true, the 51 who have given their lives this year as tribute to the juggernaut of city traffic, but rejoices over the 28 who have not died who would be included in the mortality list if there had been no improvement.

At this time in 1936, 79 had been killed in the city. Today the total for 1937 is 51. For 34 days, recently, there was not one death by traffic accident in the city. That achievement proves what can be done. If it was possible, for more than a month, to so guard against the reckless, the incompetent and the unfit drivers that not one life was lost, it is possible to do it for a greater period, for a year or, even, forever.

One of the most important factors in this reduction in tragedy has been the enforcement of better traffic rules and ordinances. More effective police control has been made possible through the co-operation of officials who have enacted wise traffic ordinances as well as the co-operation of the general public in their observance.

There will, in the future, have to be further reforms in traffic in Atlanta. Some changes may, at first sight, seem drastic and there are some which, undoubtedly, will meet opposition of selfish interests.

It would be well for everyone who would oppose these coming reforms to remember that in so doing they are opposing a system designed, primarily, to save life. A system which, while only partially in effect, has saved 28 valuable lives during the 11 months of 1937 which have passed.

THE GRAVE OF WILLIAM FEW

The reported discovery of the grave of Colonel William Few, one of the Georgia signers of the United States constitution and a founding trustee of the University of Georgia, while not yet verified, is a matter of significant interest to all Georgians.

If further investigation confirms the belief that the mortal remains of this patriot of early Georgia are actually lying in an unmarked, age-worn vault in an old cemetery at Beacon, N. Y., prompt steps should be taken by the proper authorities to protect the vault and its contents before sight-seers and souvenir hunters have despoiled it.

The grave itself should be preserved as an historic spot for all the nation and the casket containing the bones of the Revolutionary statesman, if not left in peace in the present resting place, should be brought to Georgia to be reinterred with full honor.

There cannot be too many shrines in the state and nation to lead the minds of modern Americans back to the heroic stock from which this nation grew. The strength of character and the sturdy independence which the founders of the republic breathed into the new-born nation are a vital inheritance of the ages and are needed, perhaps more now than ever, to hold the spirit of America true to its noblest ideals.

A congresswoman from Indiana would show Tokyo what's what by cutting down the famed cherry trees. Wouldn't it be enough not to look at any rising suns?

Editorial of the Day

A BOON TO BATTERIES.

(From The Cincinnati Enquirer)
A silent sign of relief must have gone up from the leaden insides of thousands of storage batteries when Cincinnati's council traffic committee recommended approved reflectors as an acceptable alternative to parking lights for use in night parking in the city.
Motorists recognize the need for something to give warning of the presence of a parked car or truck, and can appreciate the necessity of an ordinance requiring either parking lights or reflectors which serve the same purpose. In the aggregate, however, parking lights represent a considerable expense, particularly to car owners whose batteries are under heavy strain already from such attachments as radios, windshield wipers, horns, cigarette lighters, heaters and whatnot. The option of parking reflectors would be a great boon. It is to be hoped that council will agree with its traffic committee that the boon is not too much to grant to the already much-lauded-motorist.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Mystery in the Mediterranean.

The deciphering of what is really happening in Europe is a job for Agatha Christie or S. S. Van Dine. There is a combination of secret diplomacy, internal cabal, organized social forces with policies and a press, international propaganda, and clandestine warfare, which at no moment adds up to any consistent picture.

Take the strange case of the British destroyer Havock, which was fired at in the Mediterranean prior to the Nyon conference. Who fired at the Havock? Does anybody know? The Russians used to, and other incidents, to address a most vigorous protest to Rome, flatly accusing the Italian government of being the guilty party. Now, weeks later, a British journalist who is known often to speak for the British foreign office, makes the following statement:

"The day will come when the truth will be told about the clever newspaper maneuver, the object of which was to make the British public believe that the British destroyer Havock had been attacked off the Spanish coast by an Italian submarine. It is now known that the false news about the attack was introduced deliberately to work public opinion up to boiling point. But what the British authorities know now, Mussolini knew on the first day. Therefore, if him Nyon appeared the result of a plot to create deliberately a front against Italy. This must be remembered, if what follows is to be understood."

I have talked with numerous people who cover the European scene intelligently and carefully. None of them knows what this means. Was there a plot? Who was responsible for the "newspaper maneuver"—if there was one? If the Italians did not fire on the Havock, who did? Or did anybody? And why does the correspondent, who hints at so much, not tell us more? He throws no light. He introduces a new confusion. Is this also a "newspaper maneuver?"

The case of the British cruiser Basilisk is even more fantastic. On October 10, the Basilisk, on submarine patrol duty under the Nyon agreement, was attacked by a submarine in the Mediterranean between Malaga and Valencia, according to The London Times, which gave the origin of the story. If it is true, the British stood for days, when suddenly the British admiralty issued an official statement that the cruiser had not been fired on at all. But on Sunday, November 14, in the Herald Tribune's "This Week," the French journalist, Pertinax, was often the spokesman of the French foreign office, states categorically that the Basilisk was attacked, and by a German submarine, the U-24, from Wilhelmshaven. He also says that the Basilisk, returning fire, sent the U-24 to the bottom.

Now, where did The London Times get its report unless from the British admiralty itself? It hasn't got reporters stationed out in the middle of the Mediterranean. If from any other source, and untrue, why did the admiralty not deny it immediately? According to Pertinax, the denial when it came was a lie. If Pertinax himself is indulging in propaganda for the Quai d'Orsay, for what purpose? And if the statement is untrue—now that he has bluntly given the number and base of one submarine—is not that easily provable? Certainly the Germans can refute it—by producing U-24.

Isn't it clear that despite the pretension that there is a free press in Europe, the public are being fed highly colored and even censored versions of plain facts?

And isn't it clear that a strange "undeclared warfare" is going on already between the chief nations of Europe? On September 13 this column wrote, apropos the outbreak of piracy in the Mediterranean:

"It seems certain that the destroyers that have been sent out after the submarines will be instructed by their governments to be careful not to ascertain the nationality of the 'pirates' and to remain officially ignorant of the citizenship of the men who man them, and of those upon whose orders they sail. For it may turn out that these submarines are the property of a government with whom the owners of the destroyers are at peace. And, in that event, if the identity of the 'pirates' were officially known, that peace might be disrupted."

Now, if Pertinax is correct, this is exactly what has taken place. England is attempting by every possible diplomatic means to prevent the formation of a solid bloc of democratic countries plus Russia to oppose a solid bloc of Fascist states. England is still hoping that a wedge can be driven into the all-Fascist front. But the hope of all rapprochement between England and Italy or England and Germany depends on official ignoring of actual facts and the withholding of them from the public. If it is true that a British cruiser and a German submarine actually engaged in war last month off the Spanish coast, that will not further peace. So the fact is suppressed. It is even denied. The whole incident is denied.

Peace, then, rests on official ignorance of warlike acts. (Copyright, 1937, for The Constitution.)

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

It seems a few brief weeks ago
Since Christmas was here,
With all good human hearts
glow
With generous Yuletide cheer.
When every heart was filled with grace
To ease another's pain;
But how old Tempus runs the race,
December's here again!

Oldtimers
In Charge Today.

Today we'll turn the column
over to a couple of oldtimers.

First, Brother T. B. Thurman, of Wadwell street, lifts the baton. "A few mornings ago," he writes, "I read with much interest in 'Silhouettes' an extract from The Constitution of fifty years ago, saying that a torch light procession was held in Atlanta, at that time, followed by a prohibition rally. You may imagine what pleasant surprise it was to me when I remembered I took part in that procession and attended the rally that followed. If I remember correctly the rally was held in a cotton warehouse on the corner of Hunter and Forsyth streets.

Get there, get there, get there! Let's see, what was the aim. No matter what is said, Just keep a little ahead, And you'll get there just the same!

"Isn't it strange that those words, heard only once, should stick in my memory through half a century?"

"The Belle,"
Not "The Bell."

Charles H. Killian, our second oldtimer contributor, starts his letter with a correction, and remarks here some days ago about the accommodation passenger train that used to run, round trip daily, between Atlanta and Toccoa.

"I must get you straight," he writes, "on that accommodation train between Toccoa and Atlanta. It was the Air Line Belle, not Bell, usually called 'The Belle' by everybody. Other roads had accommodation trains, too.

"On the West Point Route when I was a kid telegrapher and for years later, we had the 'Goobler' making the round trip between West Point and Atlanta on week-days. It was the best paying train on the road. Automobiles and high wages killed it. Jim Lynch, who died very recently, was its conductor for years.

"But the crew I remember best, the crew that was on it in the 'way-back-yonder days, was Gorman and McDonald. I've gotten 'complete' to many a '31' train order with those signatures to it."

"In those days everybody along the line knew the conductors on the local trains and, likewise, the conductors knew almost everybody Gorman came originally from Opelika, Ala., and was a popular conductor. Wonder how many oldtimers still remember 'Cinderella' Gorman?"

"McDonald died only a few years ago. I remember him as a tall, brawny Scotsman with blue eyes, yellow hair and mustache. I'd see him on his engine passing my place of employment at Industry year after year, getting older, graver, whiteer, shrinkier as an old fellow do, until it was hard to believe he had once been the husky young Viking I remember. I'd know his whistle for 'the board' anywhere right now, just as I would know Sam Foster's, John McDonald's or that of any other old-timer.

"The Picayune"

From Covington.
"The Georgia Road had a train with a picturesque name, 'The Picayune,' running between Covington and Atlanta. Boyd and Huson was the crew. I never met Huson, but I knew Captain Virge Boyd. He fell dead on the street here a generation ago and in the lining of his coat several thousand dollars in currency was sewed. He was a member of the Lost money once in a bank failure.

"The Western and Atlantic had an accommodation called 'The Shoo-fly,' and on the Central we always called ours 'The Dummy,' after the 'dummies' that used to run on Atlanta's street between the 'Hay Burner' and electric cars. Don Wall, killed at Lovejoy a week or two ago, was engineer on the Dummy when I first started with the Central in 1900. Joe Maner was conductor, Joe, who passed out three years ago, was succeeded by Will Morrow, who is still in the service, looks as good as he always did and is just as fine a chap.

"I do not remember ever having taken a meal at Buford, but I've eaten several at Centerville, a little farther up the line. Good food and plenty of it, nice china and silver, real napkins instead of this phoney paper stuff of today, all for 50 cents."

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Sunday, December 1, 1912:

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Thursday, December 1, 1887:

"There has been, within the past few days, a decided boom in the rents of buildings suitable for wholesale and retail liquor houses, and the air is full of rumors of prospective establishments of that kind."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Home NEW YORK, Nov. 30. Building Among the many problems involved in the task of providing decent homes for people who live in urban and rural slums is one which up to now has received no mention at all, but which, nevertheless, comes early in the experience of anyone who has ever undertaken to build himself a bower in the suburbs, with roses around the door.

That is the melancholy state to which the art of house-building has declined under cover of pretty shutters, fake antiquity and dogged quaintness, all designed to catch the eye and divert attention from sprung seams, mislaid plumbing, carelessness, incompetence and miscalculation on the part of those who do the building.

In touching on this subject once before I brought down the wrath of many architects, contractors, dealers in building materials and skilled trades implicated in the misfortunes of the bag-holding private owner, but the situation is one that deserves consideration in any national housing plan.

Architects reported that the owner is most to blame for his own expensive disappointments, because he sees a picture in color on the cover of a magazine and wants a house just like that on a 50-foot lot, complete with chromium and mock-leather bar in the cellar, a Hollywood swimming pool in the garden and a room where he and his guests may shoot pool, all for $10,000, of which only $1,500 is to be cash.

Delayed The contractor sang a hymn of hate with a few specialized verses about the changeable mind of woman which wants to convert the laundry into a breakfast nook with built-in Dutch furniture and the living room into a cedar closet just about the time he is ready to pack up and call it a done job, and all for the original price.

The dealers said they preferred to sell first-class materials, but often were compelled to deliver against their own earnest advice because the owner wanted appearance above all else and an illusion, not a house. The carpenters, plumbers, electricians, masons, tinner and all insisted that they worked only to order and couldn't make good houses out of bad material, and in the end, to hear them tell it, the baffled bourgeoisie, sitting under an umbrella in his parlor on the night of the first rain, was an uncommonly low scoundrel whose troubles served him bloody well right.

There may be a suspicion of truth in these matters, but the fact remains that in the life of many sad Americans there has been no experience more trying to man's faith in his fellow man than that of building a house. It is their contention, supported by legal contracts and canceled bills, that a house is not really built until it has been built over at least once, at the owner's expense.

If the architect draws a dream and the contractor undertakes to materialize it for an agreed price there are certain fundamentals accepted by both parties to the deal which are simple enough: the pipes should give water and the roof should not; the plaster and paint should stick; the doors should not blow up, nor the smoke blow down, and the foundation should be made of good cement, not maple syrup.

Water If the lot is a swamp, the architect and builder, out of their knowledge, should advise the victim that his cellar probably will become an aquarium, and not promise to take care of the matter with a special preparation of magic, flood-resisting dough.

The government's own experience in house building has been mixed. The Herald Tribune, always there with helpful criticism, disclosed a few years ago that in one project foundations and houses touched at only a few points. On the Florida keys, however, houses built with federal assistance according to a sensible, though remarkably hideous plan, are intended to resist the worst hurricane that ever can come to blow. They seem stout enough for that, but the test is yet to come.

But in Passamaquoddy village, at Eastport, Maine, the army engineers built a Christmas card settlement of houses for the white collar help employed on the dam project at a cost of about $2,000 each, with the frank proviso that they would not last beyond five years.

They had no cellars, and they were made flimsy, thought tight, in the expectation that after five years the dams would be done and the village written off as an item in the cost of construction.

But if it cost $2,000 to build a cottage on cheap land, by mass production to last only five years, the big national project will be starting over again before it has been finished the first time.

Why Save a Dime On Imported Shoes If You Must Pay It to Feed Jobless Shoemakers?

By ROBERT QUILEN.

"We need not fear foreign competition," says one kind of politician. "With our quantity production methods, we can successfully compete with the pauper labor of Europe and Asia."

That may have been true—once. Our machinery gave us an advantage over the cheapest hand labor. But these wonderful machines are no longer an American monopoly. The people who made the machines were in business to make money, and they sold machines wherever they could.

Now Europe and Asia have machines equal to ours, cheaper labor than ours to operate the machines, and raw material bought cheaper than American manufacturers can buy it.

Here is one example of how it works. A certain family in central Europe has made shoes for many years. Until 1904 they did all the work by hand. Then some of them slipped over to America, got jobs in a modern shoe factory and learned American methods. When they went home they bought American machines.

Having acquired American skill and American knowledge and machines, but not American ideas about wages and working hours, they set out to win the American market—which is, as you know, the richest in the world.

In the shoe manufacturing center of America, 20,000 workers are now idle three days of each week. There aren't enough orders to keep them busy.

One manufacturer offered to fill a big contract at cost in order to give his people work, but the foreigner underbid him. In another instance he lost an order for 350,000 pairs because the foreigner offered to make them at $1.17 a pair and the actual cost of manufacture in America was $1.25.

So American workers walk the streets, and meanwhile the foreigner is dumping 3,000,000 pairs of cheap shoes on our market this year.

Now, all literate people know that foreign trade is a give-and-take proposition. We can't sell to foreign nations unless we buy from them, for otherwise they would have to pay us in gold and they have little gold.

But while we must buy if we would sell, it isn't necessary to buy from the same one to which we sell. You may buy no meat from the butcher, but if you buy bread from the baker and clothes from the clothier, you enable them to buy meat from the butcher and thus in a roundabout way give him the money with which to buy goods from you.

We must buy coffee, tin, cocoa, manganese, rubber and numerous other things from foreign lands. Can't we do our part by importing things we need, and close our borders to cheaply-made goods that deprive our workers of their jobs?

We are all one economic body. When one manufacturer or worker loses his income, every one of us shares a fraction of the loss.

WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Monarchy in France.
NEW YORK—The Duke de Guise, "their of the forty kings who have in a thousand years made France," has sent a manifesto to the French people telling them not to be swept away by internal divisions of Left and Right, but to stand together, exercise their common sense and call back the King from exile, because the monarch alone stands above parties and could serve as the neutral arbiter in the conflicts that have arisen between different classes of the population.

With the King he means himself, of course, Jean III. Apart from the side of the feudist reaction assumes far greater importance in a news dispatch than it does in Paris, where, after all they have a daily outpouring of monarchist propaganda in two newspapers, Action Francaise and the Courrier Royal, the distinguished pretender to the throne of Saint Louis, is all wrong historically when he affirms that the kings always stand above castes, classes and parties.

The French kings of the past certainly did not. It was exactly the fact that Louis XVI definitely took the side of the feudal reaction and the clericals which cost him his head on the guillotine. The French kings were the symbol of the very upper crust of society. They ruled over the people, perhaps in the interests of the people, but they were not above the people. They were a party in themselves.

Count of Paris Implicated.
The Duke de Guise has chosen a very inept moment to bring himself and his claims to the attention of the French nation. His son, the Count of Paris, whose title would be Henri VI if ever he should attain the throne, has just been implicated in a plot hatched on foreign soil to overthrow the government of France by force.

He met about a thousand of his captains and lieutenants from France in secrecy in Switzerland, in some Prince's chateau, and discussed with them the plans for a reconquest of France.

Most of the lieutenants and most active supporters of the royal restoration in France are aristocrats, some of them of the blood, but all belong to the social elite. If the Duke de Guise and his son, the Count of Paris, are to be judged by the company they keep, one may seriously doubt all their talk of democratic freedom and national greatness. It is the freedom of the aristocracy which they have in mind and their own glory.

Anyone familiar with currents of thought in contemporary French life knows that nothing is more distasteful to the average Frenchman than politicians and aspirant rulers who go across the borders to build up their movements or who seek inspiration abroad. Not only do Frenchmen till this day

Mann Is Negotiating For 2 Moundsmen, Slugging Outfielder

'Sington Not for Sale,' Joe Engel Says; Hugh Luby Sought From Oakland.

By JACK TROY.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 30.—The Crackers are on the verge of completing a couple of deals that will make the club a real contender for the Southern league pennant in 1938, President Earl Mann said today.

One of the deals includes two pitchers, one ace right-hander, and the other deal involves a right-handed hitting outfielder of a type the Crackers sorely have needed for some time.

The Crackers won two pennants and finished third during the last two seasons without the benefit of a rousing slugger or even a left-handed pitcher.

Dave Harris was the closest approach to a slugger the Crackers had in those seasons. A hitter of the Harris type who can connect more consistently than Dave did is what the Crackers have in mind.

"I'll be satisfied if we put one of the deals through," Mann said. "I am not ready to name names as yet, but I promise no one will be disappointed when the story breaks."

Earl is not in a position to say yes or no as to whether the Crackers will get Hugh Luby back to play second base. He is, however, conferring with Oakland officials about the possibility of it.

"Al Rubeling, the boy we got from Macon, will play second if we don't get Luby," Mann said. Manager Richards said today that any club that has a good right-handed pitcher will almost demand an eyeball (not English for highball) in any deal for him. "I hope we can get who we have in mind," he said.

Chattanooga apparently is unwilling to use Fred Sington in a deal. Joe Engel has said he will suspend him rather than let any other club have him if Fred doesn't report to the Lookouts.

The Crackers would like to have Sington, but Engel, whose hearing always was thought to be of the best, turns a stone deaf ear to all proposals.

The Atlanta club is not going to condone any dealing from the bottom. They insist on obtaining top-notch talent or nothing.

Ted Gullic, Milwaukee outfielder who slammed the ball to all corners last year, is being sought by the Crackers. It was learned tonight.

Gullic, finishing the season with a .320 average, hit 25 home runs. He is a right-handed hitter. The Brewers' manager, Alex Sothoron, holds him dearly, but it is believed the Crackers have a good chance to get him.

Eddie Moore Considered For Birmingham Post

Ex-Cracker Pilot, in Milwaukee, Hopes to Land Job; Barons Interested.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 30.—Kiki Cuyler tonight loomed as the new manager of the Birmingham Barons.

The Cubs and the Barons have a working agreement, and Cuyler, whose playing days in the major leagues appear about done, was here today in conference with Birmingham men.

Southern league directors who would talk said it appeared likely that Cuyler would be Riggs Stephenson's successor in Slagtown. He is expected to be named the Barons manager tomorrow.

By JACK TROY.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 30.—Eddie Moore, ex-manager of two pennant-winning Cracker clubs, is here to lay his cards on the table and trust to luck that he can land a job in a Class A league, or better still, in a league of higher classification.

Eddie revealed he has had six or seven offers to manage Class B clubs but has declined them all. "I don't know a thing right now and I might even leave here without a job," he said, "but I have a couple of strings out and hope to land something worthwhile."

Moore was interested in a report that Birmingham was considering him among others. Billy West, secretary of the Barons, admitted that Moore was among those the Birmingham club has under consideration.

The former Cracker pilot would like to get back in the Southern league and is prepared to make a strong bid for the one vacant managerial spot left. The other seven clubs already have signed managers for next season.

MILAN PRESENT.

Riggs Stephenson, who was released by Birmingham, is here trying to swing a managerial deal for himself. Clyde Milan, former Chattanooga manager and Washington scout, also is here looking for a scouting job. He said today he didn't know whether Clark Griffith was interested in having him or not.

Milan, who has been troubled with stomach trouble for some years, is observing a strict diet now. But he said his doctor informed him when he left Texas that he would be strong enough physically to handle a job as a scout.

"Don't know," remarked Milan, "if it wouldn't be to the best interests of other ball clubs and myself if I quit the game altogether. But it's hard to quit something you've devoted a lifetime to. It's practically my life." Milan rates tops with baseball.

BREAK O' DAY

out the dining car window at the murky atmosphere which combined haze and low-hanging smoke. There was sleet on the streets and snow covered the ground and house-tops. The sun when you could see it hung like a red ball of fire above the skyscrapers. It somehow looked like a modernistic version of the Big Apple.

"Beautiful day," one remarked. "Yes, a fine day," his companion responded.

The southerners shivered and moved closer to the heaters. They thought of Peachtree street and the fine, even climate of Atlanta. You never really appreciate it until it is driven home by such a striking contrast.

Reaching here, it was discovered that one of the papers had a picture of Earl Mann and a baseball man from Virginia.

Mann's name was under the Virginia man's picture and vice versa. I trust that is clear. And the cutlines mistakenly said both were delegates from the same town.

Whereupon, the Atlanta men were up in arms. They were not willing to share Earl Mann with a state even as fine as Virginia. There is always a deep feeling of pride to attend a national convention of the minor leagues as a representative of Atlanta, the greatest town in the far-flung system of 260 towns and 37 leagues.

THE OLD COMMITTEE-MANN.

Even if he were twins, Earl Mann could not be in all the places his ability and baseball men demand. Today, for instance, he was dividing his time between a meeting of the national executive committee and conferences with Paul Richards regarding the players Atlanta hopes to obtain here.

Between times, he was renewing many baseball acquaintances and preparing to meet with Texas league delegates relative to working out plans for the Dixie Series.

The keen young executive of the Atlanta club is held in very high esteem by Judge W. G. Bramham, czar of the minor leagues. I trust it will not be revealing a secret to say that Bramham actually considers him as a sort of right-hand man.

THREE INJURED HERE IN $25,000 BLAZE

Several Persons Narrowly Escape Death Under Crumbling Brick Wall.

Water-soaked piles of smoldering debris were all that remained of the three-story brick building of the O. B. Andrews Paper Box Company at Spring and Packard streets last night after roaring flames swept the structure. Several firemen narrowly escaped death beneath a crumbling brick wall.

Two firemen and a woman spectator were injured as a 60-foot section of the wall on the Packard street side of the building burst from the weight of tons of water-soaked bales of waste paper. Tons of brick and flaming waste paper hurtled down where a moment before a dozen firemen had been manipulating two hose lines.

They had just retreated to a point of safety upon orders of Fire Chief O. J. Parker, when the wall collapsed.

The injured were Captain Emory D. Dodson, 62, of Engine Company 20; Fireman E. C. DeFoor, of Company 1, and Miss Bessie Mansfield, of 125 Currier street.

Treated at Grady. Captain Dodson, buried up to his knees by rolling masses of brick and debris, was excited and taken to Grady hospital where he was treated. He returned shortly afterward to the fire but went home during the afternoon to rest, severely bruised but not seriously injured.

Fireman DeFoor said last night he "must have had a rabbit's foot" when he jumped from a ladder leaning against the crumbling wall. Suffering from a sprained knee, he said he didn't know how it happened unless he did it when he jumped from the ladder to escape the crumbling wall.

Miss Mansfield, 31, was treated at Grady hospital for a sprained ankle she was said to have received as she ran back out of the line of falling brick.

Meanwhile, firemen played streams of water on the smoking embers all day and Chief Parker said it would probably be several days before the bales of paper are completely extinguished.

Double Check Made. Immediately after the wall crashed a double check was made to discover if any member of the fire department had been trapped under the debris.

For several hours, Fireman Howard Anglin, of Company No. 5, was reported missing, Chief Parker said. During the afternoon, however, it was learned that Anglin had taken the day off to go hunting.

"This was one of the most dangerous fires to handle the fire department has ever had to combat," Chief Parker said last night.

The fire, discovered shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning, already had gained such headway that firemen, when they arrived, could not enter the building, he said. Bales of paper stored in the building caught almost immediately and shot flames through the roof of the building before the fire was discovered.

Fire Discovered. The fire was discovered by George Alterman, of the Alterman Wholesale Grocery Company, next door to the flaming structure. Stock valued at $250,000 was stored in the grocery company building.

Firemen confined the flames to the paper box company, however, and the Atlanta Service Warehouse Company, which occupies a portion of the building of the box company was only slightly damaged.

A three-story fire wall between the two units of the building kept flames from spreading from the box company building into the warehouse.

Damage to the box company will amount to approximately $25,000, C. S. Rogers, plant manager for the box company, estimated. Included in the loss is about $10,000 worth of machinery, $3,000 worth of crates and boxes, and $2,000 worth of baled paper. Damage estimated at $10,000 was done to the building.

Three Alarms Turned In. The fire broke out on the morning when 15 employees of the plant, out of work for more than a month, were to return to their jobs.

Three alarms were turned in and 10 companies of fire fighters answered the calls. Hundreds of spectators were attracted by the billowing pillows of smoke, but policemen, under direction of Chief M. A. Hornsby, kept the crowd well back and in order.

Chief Parker last night highly commended the work of city police as well as members of the fire department for the quick check put on the raging flames.

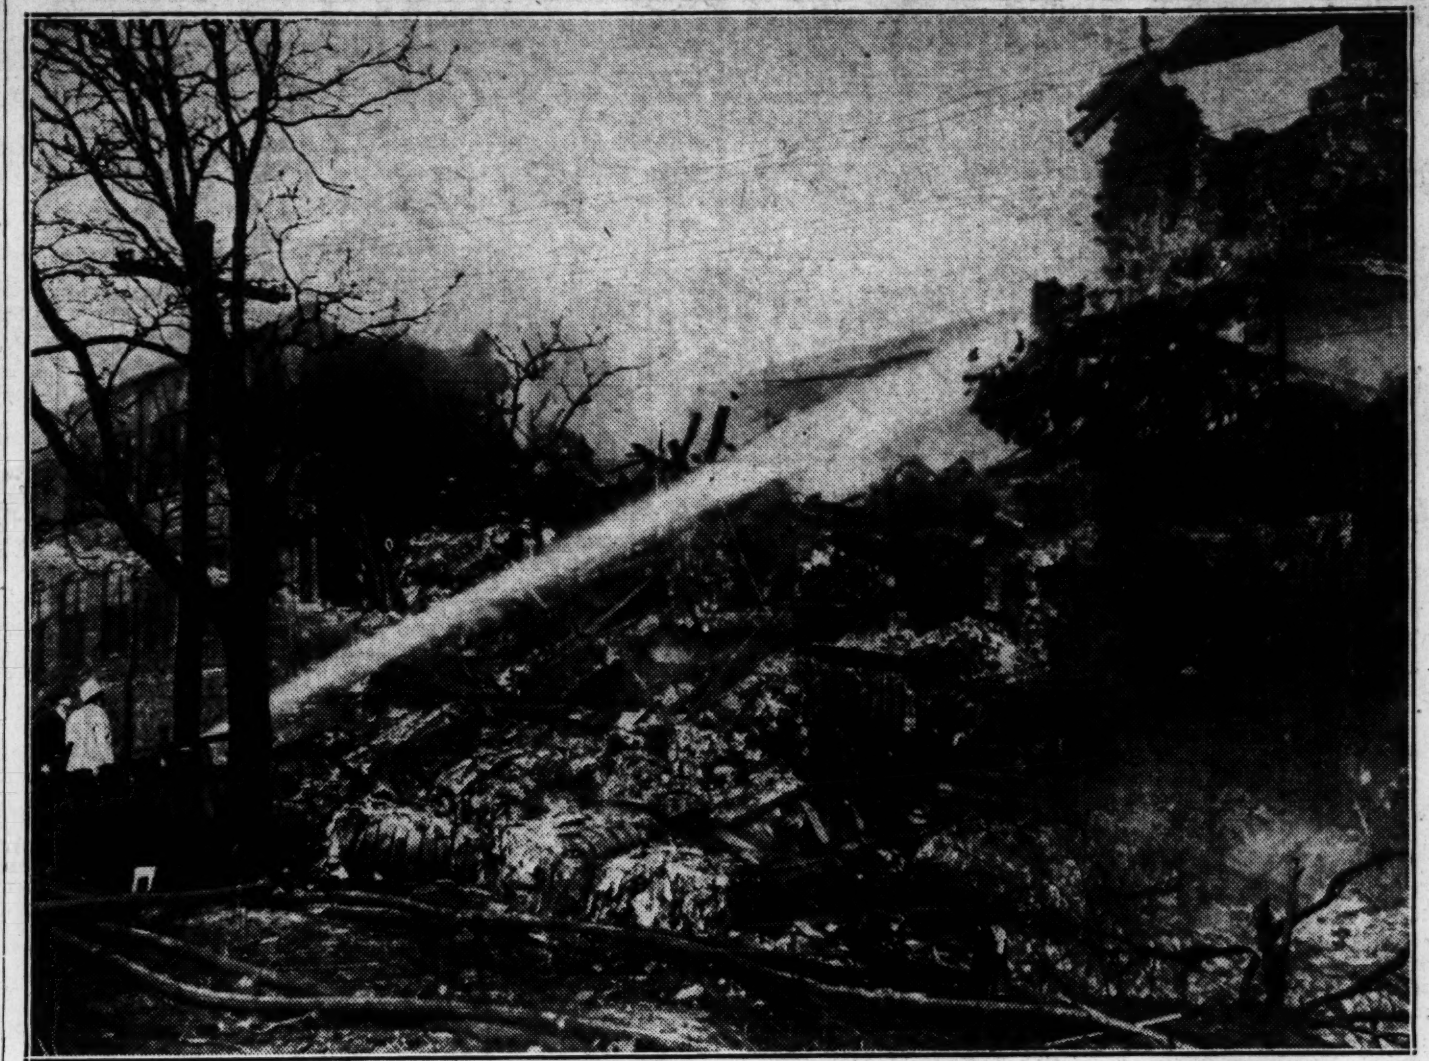

CHRISTMAS EDITION. LAGRANGE, Nov. 30.—The LAGRANGE Daily News today published its first Christmas edition, which will be distributed throughout the city's trade territory. A second special Christmas trade edition will be issued December 15.

Tardy Witnesses Told They Will Be Punished. Witnesses in cases tried in Fulton superior court had better come into court on time in the future, Judge E. E. Pomeroy warned yesterday, or they will face fines or imprisonment for contempt.

The warning came after the tardiness of seven witnesses held up proceedings in three separate cases charging assault with intent to murder.

"Cases cannot proceed with only half of the witnesses present," Judge Pomeroy said. "Not only the court but the solicitors, jurors and clerks lose valuable time when witnesses are late. In the future all who are late in answering subpoenas will face fines or imprisonment for contempt of court."

Firemen and Spectators Endangered as Flames Destroy Building

Long after raging flames swept the three-story brick structure housing the O. B. Andrews Paper Box Company to the ground early yesterday morning, firemen continued to pour water on the smoldering embers and smoking bales of paper which hurtled through a 60-foot section of the side wall of the building and nearly brought death to a dozen firemen and possible injury to several spectators. The building was described as a total loss and Chief Parker said it would probably be several days before smoldering bales of paper are completely extinguished.

TROPHY, CASH WAIT CONTEST WINNERS

U. S. Constitution Essay Competition Open To Georgia High, Grammar Pupils

A silver trophy and three cash prizes are offered the three Georgia grammar or high school students submitting the best essays on the Constitution of the United States in the contest being sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution.

Prizes will be awarded to the three winners January 3, the day following the state celebration of the 150th anniversary of Georgia's ratification of the federal constitution.

State Celebration. The state celebration will be held in Augusta, where plans for a gala sesquicentennial celebration are being pushed. The best essay submitted in The Atlanta Constitution's contest, held in connection with the state celebration, will be read in Augusta January 2.

Closing date for the essay contest is December 22. Entries must be postmarked before midnight on that date. Two subjects offered to contestants are—"The Formation and Ratification of the Constitution of the United States," or "The Men Who Made the United States Constitution."

Contestants may write on either of the subjects and may use any reference desired in gathering material.

Trophy First Prize. The first prize is a silver trophy and $10 in cash; second prize, $10 in cash, and third prize, $5 in cash. Any grammar or high school student in Georgia may enter the contest. Relatives of employees of The Atlanta Constitution or members of the Georgia Sesquicentennial Commission are barred, however.

Essays must be between 500 and 1,000 words in length. They must be written on a typewriter or written in ink. Entries should be addressed to Sesquicentennial Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Georgia and Massachusetts were represented by only one delegate each (Few, of Georgia, and King, of Massachusetts), which was not sufficient to represent those states by vote on any matter. Shortly thereafter, however, more delegates arrived from these two states, making their representations up to the required strength.

The state of Georgia commissioned six deputies to attend the convention that framed the constitution. Of these, two did not attend. Of the four who did attend, only two remained to the end of the convention and signed the constitution. The deputies were: William Few and Abraham Baldwin, signers of the constitution; William Pierce and William Houston, who attended but did not remain to the end; and George Walton and Nathaniel Pendleton, who did not attend.

(Tomorrow Mr. Brewton tells about the book that is the only history of how the constitution was framed.)

5 HURT AS BLASTS SHATTER 2 HOUSES

Accumulation of Gas Suspected in Explosions Block Apart.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Two servants and three firemen were injured today by gas explosions which shattered two residences a block apart along a quiet street in suburban Merion.

The blast scattered debris in treets and lawns. One of the homes collapsed. The interior of the other was badly damaged by the explosion and fire which spread through the basement and first floor.

Firemen said the explosions might have been caused by gas accumulating in the cellar of one home and backing up along the pipes to the second.

Residents of the neighborhood said they heard an "ominous rumbling" in the gas pipes for some time before the blasts.

WALTER H. CHANDLER FUNERAL RITES TODAY

Funeral rites for Walter H. Chandler, 49, of 1831 Lakewood avenue, who died Monday, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the Lakewood Heights Baptist church.

The Rev. Bruce Noy and the Rev. T. T. Linkous will officiate and burial will be in Hill Crest cemetery.

Mr. Chandler was an automobile salesman here the past year and a half. Formerly, he was division manager for a national tobacco firm in Savannah, Ga.

Constitution of United States Outlined for Essay Contest

By WILLIAM W. BREWTON, Director, State Sesquicentennial Commission.

Editor's note: This is another of fourteen articles offered to supply information to contestants in The Atlanta Constitution essay contest on the federal constitution, open to all grammar and high school students in the state. Contestants are not bound by or confined to this series, but are free to obtain facts from all sources available to them.

Article 3. The opening of the federal convention. The call issued by the delegates at Annapolis had no binding force, of course, and was suggestive only. The call recited that a convention of states ought to be held "to devise such further provisions as shall appear to them necessary to render the constitution of the federal government adequate to the exigencies of the Union." A copy of this call was sent to each state and to congress on September 14, 1786. On February 21, 1787, congress itself issued a call for such a convention, reciting that it was to meet "for the sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation."

Twelve States Attended. Only 12 states attended the convention which drafted the constitution. Six of these appeared under the Annapolis call, and six under the call of congress. This is shown by the dates that appear on the credentials each state issued to each of its deputies.

The quorum of seven states at Philadelphia on May 25, 1787, when business opened, were New Jersey, represented by Robert Yates and Alexander Hamilton; New York, by David Brearley, William C. Houston and William Patterson; Pennsylvania by Robert Morris, Thomas Fitzsimons, James Wilson and Gouverneur Morris; Delaware by George Read, Richard Bassett and Jacob Broom; Virginia by George Washington, James Madison, Edmund Randolph, John Blair, George Mason, George Wythe and James McClurg; North Carolina by William R. Davie, Alexander Martin, Richard Dobbs Spaight and Hugh Williamson, and South Carolina by John Rutledge, Charles Pinckney, Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Pierce Butler.

Georgia Delegates. Georgia and Massachusetts were represented by only one delegate each (Few, of Georgia, and King, of Massachusetts), which was not sufficient to represent those states by vote on any matter. Shortly thereafter, however, more delegates arrived from these two states, making their representations up to the required strength.

Mr. Chandler was an automobile salesman here the past year and a half. Formerly, he was division manager for a national tobacco firm in Savannah, Ga.

TENNESSEE'S LAW ON POLL 'INVALID'

Injunction Granted Against County Unit Primary System.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Tennessee's county unit primary law, which has the effect of reducing the influence of Shelby county (Memphis) in Democratic primaries, received a court setback today when Chancellor Howell held it "was not passed validly."

The law was enacted at an extra legislative session called after Governor Browning and E. H. Crump, leader of the Shelby county political organization, had severed their alliance and attacked each other in statements.

Declaring that six representatives who supported the unit bill in the legislature had "vacated their offices" by accepting other political positions, Chancellor Howell granted a temporary injunction restraining the Democratic state executive committee from holding a primary.

Including the votes of the six members whose rights were challenged, the unit bill passed the house with only one more than a constitutional majority.

HURRICANE HOUSE

INSTALLMENT XXXIII.

"Of course, but I'm merely hypothesizing. If such were the case, you know I believe before the night were out we should know who those people were! Simply by watching them while the storm was on. They'd let down the guard, then; they would be unmasked, as it were, by the terrible fear of a thing they cannot shoot or stab or run away from."

April was staring wide-eyed, drinking in all he said. She had not missed the nuances of intonation in his voice seemingly conversational in tone, yet oddly fraught with hidden meaning.

"Ronnie," she whispered tensely, "you don't think . . . ?"

The curtain that covered the door behind them was pulled aside.

"Just as I thought!" Sally cried, gayly. "The two of you in the dark. April, you watch, get thee hence and leave the world's greatest detective alone. You're much too pretty to be allowed more than a minute or two with any man."

It was an unwelcome interruption, for a hundred questions were on April's lips. She longed to pin Ronnie down to a direct statement which would either confirm or deny what she had read into his enigmatic "hypothetical" assumption. Yet she sensed he did not wish her to speak of it now, in front of Sally. With a feeling of frustration she prepared to leave them.

"Do hurry," she begged. "The storm will break soon and the lights may go out, even if the house power plant is well protected. We should all stay together, I think, until the lull, at least."

"Be with you shortly," Ronnie nodded.

April hurried down the hall toward the square of light that was the doorway to the main portion of the house. She trembled as she heard the stout shutters on the windows creak under the ever-growing force of the wind. The hurricane had not yet struck, but its advent was now a matter of minutes only. She felt very small, very alone . . . and more than a little afraid.

Then she stopped suddenly in her tracks, taut as a violin string. Who was that moving down the hall ahead of her—sliding along the wall, so stealthily, a blacker shadow against the gloom? Or was it overwrought nerves playing tricks with her imagination?

Not it was some one, for now the shadow slipped quickly across the stream of light that issued from the half open doorway, then ran on silent feet in a clumsy, apple-like stride.

Her palms grew moist, clammy. There was no mistaking that giant bulk! The sneaking intruder ahead of her was Walter Boorsma!

For a moment she could not move, so great was her astonishment. Boorsma! Here, in Hurricane House. But it could not be! How had he gotten in? What was he up to?

Then, as she saw the man's silhouette approach the doorway and crouch as he peered into the room where the guests were gathered, she realized with horrified precision that he meant harm to some one. She knew it as surely as she knew herself, had shouted it. And with that flash of knowledge she acted . . . acted without thinking, without pausing to weigh the possible consequences.

Her little feet raced down the hallway, the slight sound they made well covered by the tattoo of wind-driven rain and the rising wail of the gale outside.

Yet it seemed she moved not at all. Weights dragged at her limbs, her whole body was leaden, she ran as one does in a dream, without making progress. And always ahead of her was that sinister hulking shadow, now slowly pushing the door open, one hand raised.

She saw what was in that hand, and seeing, fairly leaped into the air, and came down clanking at Boorsma's wrist.

The gun barked, but the man tumbled forward, striking viciously at her as he fell. Then they both rolled into the drawing-room.

In a flash the big man threw her aside, flung her as he would a kitten. She looked up, saw him looming big above her, glimpsed the amazed faces of the others, frozen into immobility. Then Boorsma raised the gun again, and she screamed.

"Gill! Look out!"

The blast of the weapon punctuated her warning.

From where she lay on the floor, everything seemed out of perspective to April and she could not tell whether Fortuna rushed toward Gil before or after the shot rang out. Nor as Bruno McIntyre, Ronnie's gambler friend, with amazing agility, literally flew at Boorsma, she could tell whether it was Gil or the woman who sank groaning against the couch.

She screamed, struggled to her knees. But McIntyre and Boorsma were grappling now, and their locked bodies thudded against her, throwing her prone again.

"Gill!" she cried, sheer terror behind her appeal. Yet it was not fear for his safety that dragged the cry from her throat. It was the awesome sight of Fortuna Peris, her face twisted, crawling on hands and knees toward Boorsma's gun, which lay close by where he had dropped it.

It was completely unreal. The figures of every one in the room appeared shadowy. April felt powerless to move.

Only one person stood out in the scene. Fortuna, inexorably writhing across the floor, her face a hideous mask of terror. Her hands like great white claws. All the others were swirling ghost shapes, voiceless. For there was only the howling, deafening, soul-chilling roar of the wind, blotting out all other sound.

She saw Fortuna clutch the gun, saw her raise it unsteadily, saw flame leap from its barrel. Even then the sense of unreality did not leave her. Things like this could not happen. Not in real life.

Then, slowly, the mists of her mind cleared, and she stood up, saw sanely again. Saw Boorsma lying in awkward sprawl on the floor, McIntyre leaning unsteadily against the wall, her hand and Dr. Woodrow staring with gazed eyes, and Gil . . . Gil holding Fortuna's limp body in the crook of his arm and saying over and over. "She saved my life. She killed him. She saved my life."

Ronnie burst into the room, followed by Sally, and Bob, with Tennington, jerked across her line of vision.

"Good heavens!" Bob cried. Gil motioned him to silence, bent close to Fortuna's color-drained lips. The others silently moved toward the wounded woman. April saw an ugly splash of red spreading across the front of Fortuna's gown.

"Listen," she was gasping, clutching at Gil's arm. "I've got to . . . to talk. I won't . . . won't last long."

The circle bent as they strained to hear her words above the crash and roar outside. April wondered if any one but herself had detected the change in Fortuna's accent. Gone the soft, sibilant voice that had been the exotic woman's chief characteristic. Now Fortuna spoke—incidentally—in hard, harsh, Yankee tones.

"He thought I was going to double-cross him," she said, jerkily. "Maybe . . . maybe I was, I dunno. I tell for you, Gil, you know that. I figured I could get the dough and you too. I told Walter to beat it, but he didn't scare easy. That's why he tried to bump you, just now."

"I don't understand," Gil croaked. "What are you trying to tell me? What has come over you? Your voice, your accent . . . ?"

"Sap," Fortuna smiled, tenderly. "Or maybe I'm wrong . . . perhaps I'm the sap. Don't you get it, yet? Walter and I have worked this racket for years. Show up after a bachelor dies and claim I'm his widow. Forge the marriage certificate and brazen it out until the relatives pay off. Your brother was a natural, and everything was going all right until that Conway girl crabbled the act—almost. Then I let it fall for you . . . and, well, it doesn't matter now, one way or another now, I guess."

"I'd have ditched the racket," Fortuna went on, through pain-twisted lips, "if you'd have married me. But Walter wouldn't let me out. Now he . . . he's out, for good. Look on him, one way or another now, I guess."

"I'd have ditched the racket," Fortuna went on, through pain-twisted lips, "if you'd have married me. But Walter wouldn't let me out. Now he . . . he's out, for good. Look on him, one way or another now, I guess."

Ronnie spoke swiftly. "Did you and Boorsma have anything to do with killing Morton Ferris, with murdering Stephen . . . ?"

The dying woman slowly shook her head. "Get me straight, detective. I'm a damn good actress, and Boorsma was a well, take my word for it, we didn't kill anybody, but . . . but ourselves. That Webster girl, she was Walter's mistake. About the rest . . . I . . . don't know . . ."

She raised her heavy eyelids, smiled. Back came her fascinating beg accent as she said, "Geelbairt, I at least saved your life. That . . . that is what you call . . . the compensation, is . . . is it not?"

Her body stiffened. April turned away. Then she heard Ronnie curse feelingly . . . and knew Fortuna was dead.

In that instant, as though some supernatural power had held it in leash for a cue, the hurricane struck!

It caught them off guard. The house quivered under the mighty force of the first blast. The lights flickered, went out, and for a moment horrid blackness added to the awesomeness. But they slowly began to glow again, then sprang into full life.

"That window," old Tennington screeched, pointing, "it's blowing in!" Bob came flying sprang toward it, threw their combined weight against a tall desk, rammed it against the opening. A stream of water slashed across their faces.

"Get them out of here!" Ronnie screamed, gesturing at Boorsma and Fortuna. Gil and Tennington jumped to obey. "Now listen, everyone! We've got to keep our heads. Sit down and stay quiet. Don't go near windows. This house is safe . . . it won't blow away . . ."

He was shouting at the top of his voice. April knew, yet she could barely hear him above the pandemonium of the wind.

Yet they obeyed, like automata. Morinda Eggleston seated herself stiffly in a straight chair, betraying only by the lack of her fingers the extent of her nervousness. Bob drew April to a sofa, pulled her down to sit beside him, tightened a comforting arm about her shoulders. Ronnie, certainly the calmest of all, dived into the hall and came back loaded with picture projection equipment, which he proceeded to set up as though the very gales of hell itself were not loose outside. Gil and Tennington re-entered the room, and Gil sank into the nearest chair, his jaw tightened in a hard line. He flicked one glance at April, then stared at the floor.

GARGOYLES OF NOTRE DAME.

One of the world's famous churches is the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Located on an island in the Seine river, it is in what we might call the "center" of Paris.

"Notre Dame" means "Our Lady." The first stone of the cathedral was laid in the year 1163, and the work of building went on for two centuries.

If the brooding gargoyles were alive, it might think of an event which took place only a few hundred yards from the cathedral during the World War. On Good Friday of 1918, hundreds of people gathered in the church known as St. Gervais. Suddenly a shell fell on the roof and cut through the ceiling. It had been fired from one of the German "70-mile guns." When it burst, it killed 72 people who had been praying in the church.

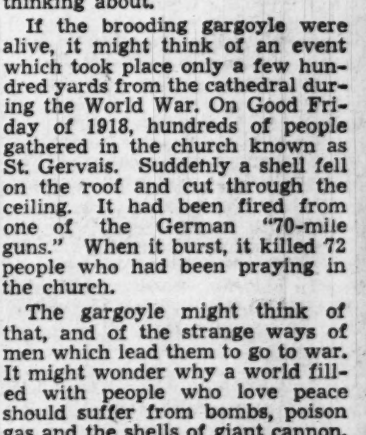

The gargoyles might think of that, and of the strange ways of men which lead them to go to war. It might wonder why a world filled with people who love peace should suffer from bombs, poison gas and the shells of giant cannon. It might wonder why the nations, so far, have not found a good way to get together to keep war from starting, or from spreading.

A Notre Dame gargoyle.

There are two towers which rise to a height of 220 feet. Inside are the tombs of a number of people, including three cardinals of the Catholic church. The arches of the church and the colored-glass windows are of rare beauty.

High up around the outside of the building are strange-looking images which are called "gargoyles." A gargoyle is an old-time waterspout which drains water from the roof gutters of a building. Often a waterspout of this kind has an ugly image around it, with the water flowing out of the mouth.

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

GREENSBURG, Pa., Monday.—Arthurdale is a grand place because I meet so many old friends there. This time, however, there were a number of new things to be seen—new equipment in the high school for the science room and for some of the manual training courses, and new furniture in the library, which, because of it, now looks like a really livable room in somebody's house. I wanted to sit down and stay a while.

We paid a visit to a man and his wife who have 11 children, the youngest one three months old. Their little four-year-old was the first homesteader's baby born on the project. To me, they are a remarkable family. The mother, who is young and pretty, is proud of the family and cheerful about her many duties. She is a grand housekeeper and has her shelves stocked with canned goods for the winter and a barrel of meat put down on the porch.

One of the homesteaders, who is 76 years old, told Mr. Pickett that he had never in his life been so well off. He had dealt with the co-operative store and had spent about $400 cash during the year, had sold produce worth $126, had enough food set aside for his own family during the winter and had grown enough vegetables to supply his son and daughter and their families. That is not a bad record for a man 76 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hamilton, a young couple, drove over from Wheeling and I was delighted to see them again. They are running a most interesting community forum in Wheeling. I think it is an encouraging sign that these forums are starting in so many places all over the country, so that both sides of various questions may be discussed.

I have been told that here and there opposition has been expressed to these forums. It probably comes from people who are afraid to have certain ideas discussed because they disapprove of them. This seems to me rather foolish because it shows, I think, a lack of confidence in our own institutions. If we cannot know and talk about what is being done elsewhere, we must have very little conviction that what is essentially right will triumph at home. I believe that when people know and understand all sides of a question, as they should in a democracy, they will have the intelligence to choose such things as are in our American traditions and have been part of our beliefs ever since this nation was founded, and they will adopt such new ideas as they consider desirable to our needs.

I never spend a day such as I spent yesterday without a sense of great humility. It is a triumph under certain material conditions to retain your self-respect and to keep on living without bitterness. One of my old friends up Scott's Run has been keeping out a pretty skimpy existence. I gathered, by taking care of two very old men. Her husband is a miner, but he has had no work for several months. Yet she invited us into her kitchen with as true hospitality as you or I would show in asking someone into our drawing room.

We spent the night in Morgantown and were on our way early this morning to visit the American Friends' Service Committee project in Fayette county, Pennsylvania.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

SOMETHING FOR THAT WINTER COUGH.

A reasonable amount of coughing is not only necessary but in itself good for one who is subject to chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis, emphysema, or asthma. The physician prescribing for such coughs generally prescribes expectorants, medicines which produce, promote, or aid coughing and expectoration.

It is a grave mistake for subjects of chronic bronchitis, winter cough, to take any kind of cough medicine containing any kind of sedative or narcotic, except under medical instruction. Ill-advised use of such medicines by subjects of chronic bronchitis is a contributing cause of pneumonia in many cases, in my opinion.

If I knew of a cough medicine good for that winter cough I'd pass the knowledge along here without a qualm of medical ethics. But I know of no such medicine. So the very best I can do is to give the recipe for O' Doc Brady's Home Made Fool Proof Cough Medicine. It may not cure anything, but on the other hand it will do no harm to try it in any case of cough or cold, in man, woman or child. If you do prepare a batch and try it without definite benefit, no harm is done and we can still be friends, can't we? On the other hand, if you experience astonishing relief after taking the medicine for a day or so, I'll be happy to hear about it, but it is not a testimonial—after all, who knows you would not have had the same experience even though you had never heard of my medicine?

In the event that there is any uncertainty or any apparent error in the printing of the recipe and directions, you will find it given in detail in the Cri book (Call it Cri) which you may obtain by mail if you send me a stamped envelope bearing your address and, darn it all, ten cents for the book.

Steep or boil 20 to 30 minutes a heaping teaspoonful of whole flaxseed in a pint of water. Strain and dissolve in the flaxseed tea one ounce of citrate of soda, one fluid ounce (two tablespoonfuls) of glycerin and the juice of a lemon. Finally add, if you like the flavor, three or four drops of essence of oil of peppermint, or whatever other essence or flavor you prefer.

Dose, for adult, a tablespoonful every two hours for two or three days. For an infant or young child, a teaspoonful every two or three hours for a day or two. Citrate of soda (sodium citrate) was formerly used as a milk alkali to add to modified milk in infant feeding, which is sufficient evidence of its harmlessness. It is an alkaline sedative expectorant, tends to oppose acidosis, is a mild diuretic, and if the whole ounce were taken at one dose it would have a mild cathartic effect.

I concocted this medicine primarily for acute croup (colds to you, dumbbells), especially where there is feverishness and cough. But numerous readers reported that they had found it helpful in chronic cough, too, and, as already explained, it can do no harm in any case.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Enlarged Thymus.

At 18 months our daughter had enlarged thymus, shown by X-ray film. X-ray treatments given. Age of three years, picture showed no enlargement left. Would it be safe to give her either for tonsil operation? (Mrs. F.J.M.)

Answer—X-ray film shows enlarged thymus in not a few infants or young children who are perfectly normal. Regardless of the thymus, I suggest that you first try giving the child an optimal ration of vitamin D to supplement her diet, for six months. If the tonsil hypertrophy does not disappear by early summer, then consider the operation.

Corn or Callus.

Would your famous corn cure be all right to use on a big callus on the sole of the foot? (Mrs. F. B.)

Answer—Yes. Paint corn or callous daily with solution of 30 grains salicylic acid in one-half ounce flexible collodion.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD. Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield—When I married a second time I was a widow with a young son. After I knew my husband and I wouldn't have children I took two infants from a foundling home and lavished all my love on them. I am essentially a homebody, too much so I suppose and I haven't given my husband the attention and understanding he craved and deserved. Now I learn that he has been stepping out with another woman who I am sure ran him down, because she calls on the phone frequently and lies in wait to meet him on the street. He assures me he doesn't care for her but every man would say that. I

Beauty According To You

By LILLIAN MAE.

What woman is there who does not rave over lovely perfume—particularly when it is presented in novel and unusual fashion?

Direct from New York has come to me a most unique package—and I have hastened to check our local stores in order that I might tell you just where you may find one for yourself, for your winner at bridge, or your guest.

It is a transparent, upstanding package, on a base of gold and royal blue. Narrow bands of grosgrain ribbon in red, white and blue extend from base to top, where the three ends are knotted into a colorful ball. So much for the package itself.

Without lifting the transparent top and sides, three purse-sized flacons—darling miniatures of regular-sized bottles, may be seen. They contain the three oldest and world-famous odors of perfume manufactured by one of the oldest and best known perfumers in the world.

I love my husband; I want to keep our home together, yet I wonder if I am doing right to hold him and if I do hold him I wonder if I should keep the children who are not legally adopted. Please say what you think. MRS. S.

Answer—Dear lady, you may be quite comfortable in your own mind about holding on to an errant husband for you couldn't hold him if he wanted to check out. Admitting that you set the stage for the episode with the other woman and are partly responsible for his going to filch affection and attention, your problem is to pay up your back debts to him and current ones as well; to assure him that the foundling babies will not make a foundling husband out of him.

When a man loves his wife, he says it first with greenbacks and he naturally expects her to express her love for him in giving him the money's worth—a comfortable home, pleasant conversation, good food and affectionate attention. She doesn't believe in his devotion unless he puts up the cash and he doesn't believe in hers unless she puts up the feminine equivalent. Naturally you want to keep the home which your husband provides and naturally he wants it to be a real home of which he is the center.

Presumably he agreed to your taking these babies to rear. Surely you wouldn't have made such a momentous decision without his concurrence. Then it shouldn't be hard for you to show him what an injustice it would be to the little ones to send them back to an institution after they had been taken into your home and had a mother's love lavished upon them.

The excessively maternal woman has her points, as all will agree, but if she fails to stretch the warm blanket of her love to cover the husband and leaves him outside, cold and shivering, she usually pays the penalty. She's lucky if she comes to in time to gather him up and put her arms around him in loving embrace.

Life moves on and the woman who devotes all her time and attention to her children, blood or adopted, can look out for a desolate old age; for the children fly away, build nests of their own and when that time comes an alienated husband is neither comfort nor joy to her lonely heart.

Best Cough Remedy Is Easily Mixed at Home

It's So Easy! Makes a Big Saving. No Cooking.

To get the quickest relief from coughs due to colds, mix your own remedy at home. Once tried, you'll never use any other kind of cough medicine, and it's so simple and easy. First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed. Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any drugstore. This is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make full pint of really better medicine than you could buy ready-made for four times the money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste. And for quick, blessed relief, it has no equal. You can feel it penetrating the air passages in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membrane, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Your Figure, Madam

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

WHEN VITAMINS HELP YOU TO REDUCE . . . THAT'S NEWS!

You can take a pill and lose from three to four pounds a week, if it's a vitamin pill. Overweights who are in a hurry to slim down will be keenly interested in the high vitamin diets for reducers.

These diets differ markedly from those by which the two-pound-a-week maximum loss usually favored by the medical profession is achieved. The daily menus were cut to 1068 Peaches street, he has three to drink from. Since he doesn't bother the fish but is quite friendly with them—Major and Mrs. Senay allow him to "be different."

Aside from the fact that the reducers on these high vitamin diets lost from three to four pounds a week with no ill effects, the experiments were amazing in other respects. There were no complaints of hunger, as might be expected with such a rate of loss. Nor did the reducers experience the unwanted fatigue, irritability and nervousness which ordinarily occur on a program in which weight loss exceeds two pounds a week.

That the reducers were free from these discomforts was attributed to the high protein content of the diets and to the supplementary vitamins and mineral salts. Vitamin concentrates were given as follows: Vitamins A and D were given in concentrated cod liver oil, four capsules daily. (It was suggested that one capsule of a preparation of halibut oil with viosterol should be equally effective.) The calcium and phosphorus was supplied in calcium phosphate in the amounts of two level teaspoonfuls daily. Six vitamin B yeast tablets were given daily.

These little bottles are of a sturdy type and will fit snugly into a handbag without breaking or leaking. I'll be glad to tell you more about this attractive package, and where it may be purchased, if you will phone me at my office in The Constitution building. If you do not live in Atlanta, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Vitamins give you vim and vigor.

The diet consisted of 780 grams of protein, 12 grams of fat, and 40 grams of carbohydrate, totaling 548 calories. Citrus fruits and tomatoes or cabbage were given daily as a source of vitamin C.

Such a rigid reducing diet should be followed only with your doctor's approval and under his constant supervision.

If reducers on this type of diet feel so well by the addition of vitamins to the food intake, it follows that even on the 1,200-calorie diet you would benefit for the use of one concentrated vitamin A and D capsule, and one vitamin B and C capsule daily. Vitamins increase vitality, not weight. Remember, only calories affect your weight.

Following is the 600-calorie diet used in the experiments, which must be supplemented by the requisite vitamin and mineral concentrates.

Breakfast—Orange juice (50 grams), 1-4 glass, or tomato juice, 2-3 glass. 1 egg and two egg whites, poached; bread (10 grams), 1-2 thin slice; coffee, clear.

Luncheon—Cold roast chicken, 1 average slice (60 grams); string beans (100 grams), 1-2 cup; skimmed milk (200 grams), 1 glass; grapefruit (50 grams), 1-4 grapefruit; tea.

Dinner—Bouillon, fat free, 1 cup; broiled tenderloin (60 grams), 1 small lean tenderloin; tomatoes (100 grams), 1-2 cup; cottage cheese salad (1-3 cup cheese, 1-8 head lettuce); mineral oil mayonnaise; tangerine.

Your dietitian, IDA JEAN KAIN.

Be sure that your daily food intake provides the highly important vitamins and minerals, follow the "Protective Diet Chart." Write to Ida Jean Kain in care of The Atlanta Constitution, for the chart, enclosing a stamped return envelope.

Eastern Star.

Among Eastern Star activities was the annual banquet given by the 1937 Matrons' Club, complementing Mrs. Bessie Cashman, worthy grand matron, O. E. S. of Georgia. The affair was attended by 185 members of the Eastern Star.

A musical program was rendered by Mrs. LeVert Mitchell and Robert Armstrong, and Mrs. Winnie Boyd entertained with a reading. An Eastern Star emblem, awarded by Mrs. Pauline Dillon for attendance at the annual inspection, was won by Mrs. Margaret Kinney, worthy matron of Adamsville chapter. A chest of silver given to Worthy Grand Matron Mrs. Bessie Cashman, by the chapters of Atlanta and Chattahoochee districts was presented by Mrs. Ruth Johnson. Mrs. Mary Downman, president of the 1937 Matrons' Club, presided and Associate Grand Patron Otis Hathcock acted as master of ceremonies.

Among guests were Past Grand Matrons Madames Pauline Dillon, Julia Jackson Turner, Fannie Mae Dabney, Irene Ellison, Arden, Ethel Jackson and Mrs. Tom Wilemon.

Other grand officers seated at the honor guest table were Madames Leslie U. Mer, Geneva Foddrell, Grace Lynn, Rowena Ward, Margaret Lane, Louise McDullien, Louise Carter, Kate Mease and Past Grand Patron W. A. Linn and Eugene Cashman.

The tiny tropical fish have learned that Tom is harmless—so they nonchalantly swim to the top of the water when he drinks, just to pass the time of day.

Though great at catching mice and chasing a number of pet squirrels up and down the trees in the neighborhood he still remains impervious to the attraction of the fish.

He sits and looks at them as they swim around in the water, then he springs up on the window ledge, takes a few drinks and with an expression which says, "I could if I wanted to—but I won't," calmly walks away.

"And as long as he doesn't bother the fish, we'll let him drink out of the fish bowls—but one slip and it's all over," said Mrs. Senay, yesterday.

Former Atlantans To Sail Today From Kobe, Japan, for Visit Here

By Sally Forth.

TODAY is a red letter day in the Walter T. Candler household. For four years December 1, 1937, has been awaited by the family and during that time, the days, weeks and months have been marked off the calendar, and now, "at long last," the day has arrived. It means the sailing date from Kobe, Japan, of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson and their son and daughter, John and Lucy, who are on their way to America and home.

Mrs. Wilson, you know, is the former Eugenia Candler, eldest daughter of Walter T. Candler, and after her marriage to John Wilson four years ago she sailed away to Kobe, Japan, where her husband is connected with an American banking firm in the Orient. There have been no trips home during their four-year residence in Japan, but today brings thrills galore, for the Wilsons are sailing for home.

They booked passage on the Empress of Japan and will stop by Hawaii en route. Their schedule calls for arrival two weeks hence in Vancouver, B. C. They will come direct to Atlanta to spend Christmas with their father and their brother and sisters, Walter Jr., Asa IV, Rae and Mary Candler Edmondson and Bootie Candler. Present plans call for the visit here also of John's mother, Mrs. John C. Wilson, of Miami, and his brother, Elkin Wilson, of Ithaca, N. Y., who will also spend Christmas with the visitors from Japan.

It is a safe bet to say that the center of attraction will be the children, John Calhoun and Lucy Eugenia, who were born in Japan. John is three years old, while his little sister will mark her second birthday on Christmas Day, thereby making the day one of double significance.

Eugenia and John will form the inspiration for a series of social affairs, for both were popular figures in society here before they left for the Orient. Their visit will extend over four months, which, of course, will slip by all too soon. All is in readiness at Lullwater Farms, the Candler estate in Druid Hills, for the eldest daughter of the household and her family. Christmas trees have been selected, presents have been bought and wrapped for the return of the Wilsons.

VIRGINIA FLEMING, who writes a clever column entitled "Gossip" in the Sunday Augusta Herald, says:

"One of the loveliest fall brides will be Ermine Cater, whose engagement is announced today to Harry English Robinson, of Atlanta. This is a romance which began at first sight last spring during the Masters' golf tourney and which will culminate in their marriage which will be a quiet event of December, due to a recent bereavement in his family.

"Ermine is the oldest daughter of Mrs. John Morrill Cater, the former Miss Effie Brabham, and the late Mr. Cater. Her marriage will be of interest in Georgia and South Carolina, as her family has long been prominent in Barnwell county, South Carolina, her maternal grandparents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Idis Brabham. She is a graduate of the Junior College in the class of 1937, and has made her home here for many years, where she has always been one of the most popular of the younger set and admired by a host of friends, both young and old.

"English is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Dixon Robinson Sr., of Atlanta. He is a graduate of the Virginia Military Academy, later attending the Harvard School of Business Administration. He is now associated in business with Clement A. Evans & Co. in Atlanta, and is a member of the Piedmont Driving Club and the Nine O'Clock Club.

"Many parties will be given complimenting the lovely December bride-elect. Mrs. Randall Strozier will entertain for her on Saturday afternoon."

MRS. FRED HOYT and Mrs. Ben I. Simpson, who attended the celebration of Dr. and Mrs. William R. Dancy's twenty-fifth wedding anniversary last Saturday evening in Savannah, report the occasion equally as brilliant as the hosts' wedding, which was a notable event of November 27, 1912. Mrs. Hoyt, you know, is Dr. Dancy's sister and was an attendant in the wedding that united the former Cecilia Woods and Dr. Dancy. Although unable to attend the anniversary recep-

Mr., Mrs. Hodgson To Be Honor Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford L. Ellis will entertain at an appetizer party at 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon as a complimentary gesture to their brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Hodgson, who recently returned to Atlanta for residence. The party will be given at the Piedmont Driving Club and will assemble more than a hundred members of the young married contingent of society.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Van Winkle Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis III will assist in entertaining the guests.

Until last October, Mr. and Mrs. Hodgson resided in Korea, where they have made their home ever since their marriage several years ago. Mrs. Hodgson is the former Miss Janet Bloom, of Chicago.

Miss Helen Aycock Is Presented To Atlanta Society at Tea-Dance

MISS HELEN AYCOCK.

Miss Helen Aycock, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Aycock, was formally presented to Atlanta society yesterday at a colorful tea-dance given at the Piedmont Driving Club, with her parents as hosts.

The ballroom of the club was artistically decorated for the occasion. Clusters of smilax topped the columns ranging the length of the room and the columns were gracefully entwined with festoons of smilax. The receiving line stood at the right of the entrance to the ballroom before masses of palms and ferns interspersed with the many beautiful floral bouquets sent to the debutante by a host of friends.

The two long tea tables were placed on either side of the ballroom and were graced with bouquets of pink roses. Punch bowls banked in ferns were placed on small tables in the foyer of the club.

In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Aycock, Miss Aycock and her guest, Miss Catherine Cheatham of Miami, Fla. Miss Aycock was beautifully gowned in a floor length model of pink chiffon cut along bouffant lines and she wore a shoulder spray of lavender orchids. Miss Cheatham chose for the occasion a gown of white satin cut along simple lines and her bouquet was of purple orchids. Mrs. Aycock was handsomely gowned in an informal dress of black lace and her shoulder was adorned with orchids.

Assisting in entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Magill, Mr. and Mrs. James Jetton, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Bridges, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Othman, Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Fleming and Misses Lucile and Frances Wells.

C. of C. Sponsors

Doll Project.

Mrs. James R. Little, president, Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, calls attention to the Christmas doll project of the Women's Chamber of Commerce and commends this worthy undertaking to the general public as well as all Atlanta clubwomen, urging their support in the contribution of one or more dolls for the joy of underprivileged little ones at Christmas.

These dolls need not necessarily be dressed, as Atlanta school children will dress them in Georgia cotton as their special contribution. The Women's Chamber of Commerce is one of the 100 clubs comprising the federation and Mrs. Little bespeaks the co-operation of all clubs in making the goal of 6,000 dolls. Dolls may be sent to the office of the Women's Chamber of Commerce in the Grand building.

Crawford W. Long U. D. C. Plants Tree.

Crawford W. Long U. D. C. met at the Crawford Long hospital recently. The president, Mrs. A. H. Strickland, presided.

The meeting was concluded at the Confederate Soldiers' Home, when a tree was planted and dedicated as a living memorial to the 150th anniversary of the constitution of the United States.

Veteran J. H. Herb threw in the first shovel of dirt and he was followed by Mrs. A. H. Strickland, Mrs. J. R. Pruitt, superintendent of the home; Mrs. G. K. Wood, chairman of the Soldiers' Home. The president presented the tree and Mrs. Pruitt accepted it in behalf of the Confederate veterans.

It was the first evergreen given the home in her administration. Mrs. G. K. Wood won the blue ribbon for best work during the past month. Mrs. Mae R. Fricks sponsored the program. Miss Marion Lumpkin was at the piano.

Mrs. G. K. Hood, Miss Marion Lampkin, Mrs. J. S. Blick gave readings.

The president invited the chapter to constitution sequentennial program sponsored by six organizations December 7 at Buckhead. Mrs. J. S. Blick invited the chapter to a Christmas party in her home December 29.

Pocahontas Club.

Past Pocahontas Club met recently with Mrs. Harriette Caldwell at 1013 Blue Ridge avenue, N. E. A bazaar with many handmade gifts was held. In contests prizes were awarded to Mrs. Lula King and Mrs. Clara Wilson.

Class Bazar.

The Nicollsen Class of the Peachtree R. O. d. Presbyterian church will sponsor a bazar Tuesday, December 7 in the classroom. Lunch will be served. There will be an apron, doll, baby and miscellaneous booth. A prize will be given by Mrs. George Ripley for the most attractive booth.

Don't miss this splendid collection! Price of book 15 cents. Send your orders to Lillian Mae Pattern Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Debutante Trio Is Complimented

Mrs. Howard Smith and Mrs. Howard B. Harmon were hostesses yesterday at a tea at the home of Mrs. Harmon on Habersham road, complimenting Misses Ida Akers, Laura Hill and Helen Bell, a trio of attractive debutantes.

Red roses and white chrysanthemums predominated in the decorations in the reception rooms, and the lace-covered table in the dining room was adorned with a silver bowl filled with red roses and white carnations, encircled by silver candelabra holding red candles. Presiding at the silver tea and coffee services were Mesdames Walter Hill, William Akers and W. R. Bell, mothers of the honor guests; Mesdames William Brumby, of Marietta; Clifford Hatcher and Alex King Jr.

Receiving the guests in the hall were Mesdames George Bland, Charles Chalmers, Carl Lewis and Berrien Moore. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Ivan Allen Sr., Willard McBurney, John M. Slaton, Misses Dorothy Sanford and Ann Brumby, of Marietta, niece of Mrs. Harmon.

Miss Polly Chisholm To Wed Mr. Wylly

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 30.—Announcement is made today by Dr. and Mrs. Julian Ford Chisholm, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Polly Levering Chisholm, to John Cummings Wylly.

Miss Chisholm is the younger daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Chisholm and the granddaughter on her maternal side of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Walker Levering, of Baltimore. Her paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. William W. Chisholm. She attended the Pape School and afterwards graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington, D. C., where she was a member of the French and Optima Clubs. Miss Chisholm traveled and studied abroad for a year before making her debut in 1933-34. She is a member of the Junior League of Savannah and a charter member of the Assembly.

Mr. Wylly is the son of Mrs. Alma C. Wylly and the late Lucian Dawson Wylly. His grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cummings and the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wylly. He graduated in 1927 from the Woodberry Forest School at Orange, Va., where he was senior prefect, and in 1932 graduated from the University of Virginia Law School. He is a member of the Chi Phi fraternity. Mr. Wylly is now practicing law in Savannah. The wedding will take place during the early part of next year.

Atlanta P. T. A. Council To Meet.

Mayor William B. Hartsfield will address Atlanta council Thursday morning at 9:45 o'clock in Rich's tea room. "To Secure Adequate Laws for the Care and Protection of Children and Youth" is the subject to be discussed by Mayor Hartsfield.

A membership roll call with each local reporting the number of members, has been announced by Mrs. Elmer Slider, president Atlanta Council.

Plans by sectional leaders have been arranged as follows: Mrs. W. T. Standard, leader of preschool group, will hold an open discussion with questions and answers; C. T. Stewart will address the elementary group; Mrs. B. F. Hedges, leader junior high group, announces that Reid Hunter will speak on "How to Prepare the Child for Senior High"; Mrs. A. C. Lasher, senior high group leader, has secured Rev. T. G. Morrison as speaker. Rev. Morrison's topic will be "Religion in the Life of the High School Boy and Girl."

Miss Burgess Weds Rufus R. Surles.

Miss Willie Lee Burgess, daughter of Mrs. Ruby Brooks Burgess, of Brookwood drive, N. E., and the late William Lee Burgess, became the bride of Rufus Randolph Surles on November 24, with Dr. Irby Henderson officiating at his home in West End. The ceremony was witnessed by a small group of close relatives.

The bridal couple left for a wedding trip to Savannah. Mr. Surles is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Surles, of College Park. His mother was before her marriage Miss Emma Leila Kilgore, of Columbus.

LaGrange Weddings.

LA GRANGE, Ga., Nov. 30.—Miss Anne Barber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Barber, became the bride of Jefferson Whitely, of Franklin, on November 18, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Freeman, in Abbottsford. The attendants were Miss Darleen Cook, Miss Mary Alice Woody, Asbury Woody, and John Talley. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whitely, of Franklin.

Miss Mamie Ruth Norris became the bride of Roder Lewis Murphy on November 25, at the home of the Rev. J. B. Rice, pastor of the Second Baptist church, who officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy left for a wedding trip after which they will reside in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Miss Virginia Little Becomes Bride Of Mr. Boardman on December 4

Miss Virginia Frances Little becomes the bride of Fredric James Boardman at an evening ceremony taking place on Saturday at 8 o'clock, at the Cathedral of St. Philip, with Dean Raimundo de Ovies performing the ceremony in the presence of relatives and a small group of friends. The church organist, Arthur Davis, will render the musical program.

The bride-elect's cousin, Mrs. Richard Newell, of Carrollton, will be matron of honor, and bridesmaids will include Misses Frankie Marbury, Margaret Talmadge, Jeanne Turner and Mrs. Keith Payne. Little Claire Wynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfrey Wynn, will be flower girl.

Joe Fisch will serve as best man for Mr. Boardman and Lee Holley, O. W. Miller, Louis Collins and Mr. Howard Fisch will be groomsmen and ushers. The bride-elect's father, Alvin Little, will give his lovely daughter in marriage.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Miller will entertain at an informal reception at their home on Rockmont drive for the bridal party, the families and a few intimate friends of the bride-to-be and the groom-elect.

TARZAN UNDER FIRE No. 39

Yvonne continued to sob softly. Dick patted her shoulder and tried to reassure her in his halting, schoolboy French. "Pardonnez-moi," he said in the precise English of an educated foreigner; "but your French is so funny."

"Oh, so you speak English," Doe sighed; "that's a great help, on account of Dick's very bum French." He added anxiously: "Think you can travel through the trees?" "Perhaps with a little help," the girl smiled; "I am quite a what you call it?—tomboy."

Yvonne's smile turned into a frown as she added gravely: "We must go at once. The sun worshippers are looking for a human sacrifice. If they catch us, it will be one of you—or both." Nothing more was needed to electrify the little party to instant action.

Along the arborescent terraces they made their way through the terrifying jungle. The night was dark. Progress was slow. And, instead of traveling toward Yvonne's home, they were moving in a circle which would place them in the direct path of the brute-men!
